Blondie Helping Unravel Atom Mystery

Comic Strips Are Handed Difficult Job

NEW YORK-(Special to The Oregon Statesman)-The comic adult pickers and enclose $1 for regstrip-atomic scientists hope- is the new key that will unlock the mystery of atomic energy for millions of Americans.

The funny-page folk, used during the war to help pilots learn to 1, fly, and in our schools to teach a variety of subjects, are tackling their toughest educational job to date in the Atomic Energy exhibit, a feature of New York City's Golden Jubilee, which will continue to September 19. Called to active duty by Lt.

General Leslie R. Groves, former commanding general of Manhattan Project, Blondie, Dagwood, and other famous comic strip char-acters responded nobly. They volunteered to star in a 24 panel, full-color exhibit planned to bring scientific jargon of atomic theory down to the every-day talk of Blondie's kitchen The comic and the atom got strips. Joe Musial, veteran King shall Crick, Rt. 6, Box 430 Salem.

WANTED: Experienced full and par

Features Syndicate artist and WANTED, EXPERIENCED mechanic Features Syndicate artist and also a man to wash cars—call—comic book director, was called in warner motor co., Features Syndicate artist and to work with General Groves. Dr. Dunning, and Dr. Louis M. Heil. head of the physics deaprtment at Cooper Union.

From more than 200 pencil drawings, Musial made a series of comic pane's showing what an atom is, how it is split, and what happens when it is split. Then Blondie and family were shrunk to molecular size on the bour hand of Mandrake the Magician's wristwatch, and finally made to disappear inside a molecule of water. From there they set out to explore the mysteries of atomic fis-

Serious-minded atomic experts chuckle when they see Dagwood stretched out on the water molecule saying. "It's soft as a mattress." And in another panel, Dagwood works with a pile of protons and neutrons yelling, "Hey Blondie! Look! I can make gold! I'll be a millionaire!"
