

Woman Mayor Seeks Unity In Split Berlin

By E. A. SHANKE
BERLIN, Aug. 23-(AP)—A wisp of a woman mayor is trying to hold this quartered, besieged city together.

Governing a city of ruins and 3 1/2 million hungry Germans over which the allies are quarreling would be a two-fisted job in any job any place in the world. For the last 15 months frail 61-year-old Louise Schroeder, has been shouldered with the task.

When she took the job a year ago last May, she thought it would be only temporary until the four allied commanders could agree on a mayor. The Russians refused to approve Dr. Ernst Reuter, a social democrat who was duly elected.

As the months passed, the differences between the Russian commander and his western opposite numbers deepened. And now Frau Schroeder has landed squarely in the middle of an intense East-West struggle over Berlin and the wider issue of Germany.

Here always was an uneasy job of meeting the minds of East and West without offending either. She was doing well, all agree. But then this last great crisis developed in which the Russians are trying to squeeze the western powers out of Berlin through a blockade.

4 Commanders
"Since the Kommandatura (allied four power administration body of Berlin) failed, I now must deal with four commanders where I used to work with a single allied body," Frau Schroeder says. "Everything I want to do must have four approvals, although the western commanders usually act in unison."

What's worse, the commanders are beginning partly to work through their borough mayors. That must be overcome. I am working to hold Berlin together. No matter what the allies say or do Berlin is a unit, and I was chosen mayor by and of all Berlin."

To Reject Orders
She had to reject Russian orders, for example, that the soviet east mark was the only legal currency in Berlin, although she knew the circulation of both East and West money in the capital would lead to economic confusion.

Frau Schroeder was born in Altona on April 2, 1887, the daughter of a construction worker who also was a social democratic party functionary. By the age of 23, she had taken to politics in the social democratic party, and interested herself particularly in social welfare problems.

Former Deputy
When the nazis seized power in 1933, she was a reichstag deputy. The nazis soon suppressed her party and forced her into political retirement. She was put under police watch. To earn a living, she started a small bakery but the nazis boycotted her and forced her to quit.

She lives in two rooms sublet from a friend in a small house with a garden in the Borough of Tempelhof near the huge airdrome where American cargo planes fly in day and night with supplies for Berlin.

Like many another Berliner she loses sleep because of the constant drum of the planes as they come in to land. But that doesn't bother her.

Glad to Hear Planes
"It is helping now to stave off starvation," she says. "Each plane that arrives stretches the food so much farther and helps us to keep a three to four weeks reserve on hand."

"But in another three months winter will be here. What then? We must have coal for the households. And every plane bringing in coal means so much less food."

"I hope a decision will come by then."

Swan Island Shelter
Closed by Red Cross
PORTLAND, Aug. 23-(AP)—The Swan Island shelter, which cared for 2,200 Vanport flood refugees, was closed by the Red Cross today after the last refugee found living quarters elsewhere.

The downtown Red Cross warehouse closed, too. From it had gone 35 tons of clothing and 33,000 articles of furniture to flood victims.

Rising Costs Bring Canada Crisis Near
By Robert Bunnelle
OTTAWA, Canada, Aug. 23-(AP)—The high cost of living in Canada appeared today to be mounting toward the national crisis point.

To the individual this upward price trend is a tougher matter in Canada than in the United States, for the average Canadian earns less than his neighbor to the south.

A recent estimate put the average pay of the Canadian industrial worker at $37.02 per week, compared with $51.68 at that time for his U.S. counterpart.

Consolidation Plan Snagged

MILTON - FREEWATER, Ore., Aug. 23-(AP)—The new proposal to consolidate the twin towns of Milton and Freewater ran into a legal snag today.

City attorneys of the two towns contended the proposed consolidation charters were illegal. They argued that all members of the city commissions must approve a single charter, or must agree upon two charters.

The argument postponed a decision on when to call a special consolidation election. A similar election several years ago ended in a vote against the merger.
