Even after woollens have been approved by the weavers, critical Kuppenheimer examiners subject them to 15 additional inspections.

A well-equipped laboratory rigidly tests and skillfully treats all fabrics, assuring their fine quality.

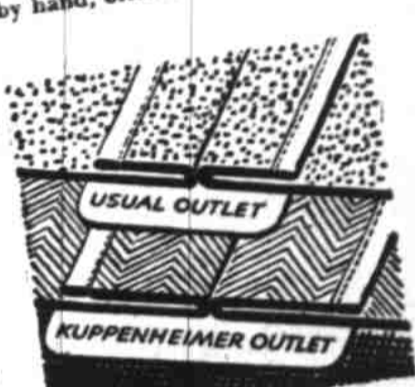

Thousands of new patterns, precise to 1/64 of an inch, are cut each season. There's 72 years of designing experience back of each Kuppenheimer.

Exact pattern matching at seams and pockets is assured by cutting by hand, often a suit at a time.

Kuppenheimer style is tailored in, not padded in. Plus Tailoring — soft, supple construction — means lighter weight, greater comfort.

Liberal outlets — the most generous allowances of extra fabric in the clothing industry — make alterations easy and satisfactory.

Careful pressing of inner parts after each tailoring operation shapes clothes permanently, makes them keep their style through countless cleanings.

Sleeve and coat linings are carefully sewn by hand, so they hang properly and stay smooth regardless of hard wear.
