Council Authorizes Hearing On Proposed Zone Changes

(Council news also on page 1)
 Salem's city council Monday night authorized for December 13 public hearing on a proposed zone change to permit an apartment house across from Salem high school on 14th at D streets and a bid opening for a $59,136 street improvement bond issue.

The change from class I to II residential zone, sought by Alton L. Pierce, has won preliminary approval from the city planning and zoning commission. The bond sale would cover the cost of street improvements for which abutting property owners are footing the bill.

Preparing Fee Study
 City Manager J. L. Franzen told the council he is preparing an overall study of city license fees and probably will recommend changes designed to put the various fees on a comparable basis. His report is expected by the end of the year, he said, after the council heard a protest that the $25 weekly fee for palmists is too high.

Theodore Gorman appeared on behalf of Palmist Anna Johnson to ask that her license fee be made more reasonable and placed on a quarterly or annual basis. She has operated in downtown Salem since last summer and is now located on Ferry street.

Changes Rejected
 The council rejected three citizens' requests for exceptions from city laws, including: (1) Vacation of part of Front street so Pacific Cooperative Poultry Co. could build a loading platform at Front and Hood streets; (2) reduction of sewer rental fee for McDowell meat market which asserted most of its sewer use is for cooling water only, and (3) sign atop marquee for Red Cross pharmacy at High and State streets.

The city engineer was instructed to study two trees on 13th street near State where residents have expressed fear the trees may blow down as a result of root cuts in recent years necessitated by sidewalk repairs.

Five bills were passed to assess the cost of street improvements against property holders along Hickory from Broadway to 5th streets; Pine from 5th to Church streets; Hickory from Broadway to 5th streets; 24th from Market street to the north end of the street and Norway from Liberty to 4th streets. Another bill passed reestablishes the sidewalk line on Hickory street between Maple and 5th streets.

Death Claims Two Well-known, Active Oregon Physicians

PORTLAND, Nov. 22-(P)—Death has claimed two veteran Portland physicians on their 64th year.

Dr. Charles J. Dean, who founded the Dean clinic here 32 years ago and later extended the clinic to Seattle, San Francisco, and Los Angeles, died in a hospital this morning at the age of 64.

Dr. Thomas W. Ross, 64, succumbed to a heart ailment yesterday. Ross had served on the state fishing commission, the Portland boxing commission, the U. S. pension board, and was editor of the magazines Medical Sentinel and Medico.

Colder Weather Influences Thief

City police agreed Monday that an auto prowler operating in Salem Saturday must be warm and maybe, (hic), a little under the weather.

G. G. Hage, 1130 Chemeketa st., told officers a thief entered his parked car in the downtown district Saturday afternoon, taking two overcoats, a blanket and a bottle of liquor. They were valued at $85.

Medford Man Named to State Forestry Board

Appointment of Floyd Hart, Medford, as a member of the state board of forestry to succeed the late George Gerlinger of Portland was announced by Gov. John H. Hall Monday.

Hart, an employe of the Timber Products company at Medford, will represent the West Coast Lumbermen's association on the forestry board.

Leftist in CIO Told to Get Out Or Get in by President Murray

PORTLAND, Nov. 22-(P) CIO President Philip Murray gave communist members of the union an unprecedented tongue-lashing at the national convention here tonight.

Delegates urged Murray on as he hurled accusations at the reds and red dominated locals and he responded.

"We do not want the communist party in New York to be pulling strings and have delegates here acting as Charley McCarthy," he asserted.

"I'm sick, I'm sore, I'm tired of these subtle maneuverings on the part of certain people... to undermine labor organizations," he thundered.

Murray then appealed to the convention to declare whether affiliated unions could continue to refuse support to CIO policies.

"Either we have policy or we don't," he asserted. Once again a roar of approval met him.

Earlier Murray demanded reorganization of three unions which he said had failed in the CIO's mission "to organize the unorganized."

There was some question on what action the convention might take against the unions Murray singled out.

The CIO constitution already empowers the executive board to investigate the affairs of unions, but not to oust their officers.

But there was sure to be heavy pressure on the officers of the three unions to resign. The convention, by a two-thirds vote, can revoke the charter of unions.

Abram Flaxer, president of the United Public Workers, told reporters he would make a convention speech replying to Murray's attack.

James Durkin, president of the office and professional workers, could not be located for comment. Durkin is also president of the New York City CIO council—or was president, before the executive board revoked the council's charter Saturday on the ground that the council gave "slavish adherence" to communist dictates.

Samuel Wolchok, president of the Retail and Wholesale union, told a reporter he didn't think Murray was referring to him when he spoke of resignations.
