Don't Look Now...

but... one of our men readers said hats must have been sumpin' in the old days too, because he remembers his grandfather saying about a hat his grandmother had, "It looks like a New England boiled dinner."

Deep stuff... sometimes when those former horn tooters turned radio MCs go in for serious talk they're a riot. The other morning we heard one (the one who says he's giving us the "best in recorded music" and then plays a 5 minute drum solo) say, "But seriously folks, let's go back to the scene of the first Thanksgiving. Imagine the feeling of those Pilgrims landing on Plymouth Rock when they looked around and saw these great United States." Really he did say that. Look out for curves... Maybe you don't think the rural woman cares about her figure but my mail order catalogue devotes 19 full pages to women's corsets.

Old stuff... The old gripe, disinterred by funnyman writers every Christmas season, about how the man of the family had better ask for sex and ties—he'll get them anyway, doesn't sound so original when one stops to think that Mamma had better ask for things for the house (that Dad will use just about as much) because if she doesn't get them for Christmas she never will at all. She can expect a new floor lamp to set beside her husband's chair, a new egg beater for his angel cake, a soft bathmat to put his footies on, or a vacuum sweeper to clean up after him. Maxine Buren
