This 50-foot slide washing out a section of the county road along the Abiqua river in eastern Marion county is being worked on by county crews, according to County Engineer Hedda Swart. In background is length of perforated steel pipe being installed parallel to a new section of road, to carry off water which has caused the slide. The slide occurred one-eighth mile east of Coleman bridge. (Photo by Don Dill, Statesman staff photographer.)

Schedule for Salem Night Classes Listed

Schedules for the resumption of Salem's adult education classes on January 3 were nearly complete today. Some new courses have been added to meet the request of the growing "student body" and others may be added later, according to George D. Porter, adult education director for Salem public schools.

Final outline for classes under the extension division of the state department of higher education includes the following:

Monday—History of the Pacific northwest, taught by Dr. Joseph W. Ellison of Oregon State college; voice and diction, Jeanne H. Popovich, OSC; construction and use of visual aids, William C. Reid, OSC, and R. W. Tavener, Salem schools director of audio-visual education; current affairs, Dr. John M. Swarthout, OSC; ceramics, Ivan Hauser of the Colony Pottery works at Aurora. All are at 7 p.m. at the senior high school.

Tuesday—Art structure II, Margaret McDevitt, Salem supervisor of art, at 7 p.m. in city library.

Wednesday—Geography of North America, Oliver H. Heintzelman, Oregon College of Education; music methods and materials, Gret-

Safety Meet Hears Range of Speakers

Delegates to the fifth annual safety conference heard opinions of management, labor, and administration through the first of the two-day session Thursday.

Following opening ceremonies at 10 a.m., conferees slugged at the accident prevention in industry throughout the day. Morning and afternoon sessions featured top members from the various fields.

First aid training was emphasized as a vital part of prevention work in remarks by L. O. Arens, member of the accident commission. T. Morris Dunne, third member of the commission, said a standardization of safety codes—a powerful influence in reducing accidents, can be achieved through the participation of representatives of other states at the conference.

Editor Speaks
Manley J. Wilson, editor of the International Woodworker, told delegates at the session, "(labor) wants to work with management in job planning and desires effective laws for safety regulations covering changed conditions."

Viewpoint of the lumber industry was aired by E. H. Crosby, who said accident prevention is the responsibility of the employer, employee and labor organizations. He said that management is confident that with the cooperation of labor and the use of tools now provided, it will be able to reduce materially the workers' hazard.

Northcutt Talks
Accident prevention in construction industries was discussed by Ray H. Northcutt, representing the Guy F. Atkinson company, while C. W. Broom of Bausch and Lomb company and C. A. Buckmiller of Corbett Veek and company spoke on "Sight and Hearing in Accident Causation."

A panel discussion on accident prevention was conducted by Dan Adair, supervisor of safety, Washington state department of labor and industries; R. M. Evenden, director, accident prevention division, Oregon State industrial commission, and A. C. Blackman, chief of the bureau of industrial accident prevention, department of public relations, state of California.

Robert Scott Wins Collegian Story Contest

Robert Scott, Salem, was awarded first prize in a short-story contest sponsored by the Willamette Collegian, university student publication, it is announced in today's issue of the Collegian. Scott received his award for his short-story entitled "Tempos" after judges Ethan Grant, Salem writer, and Thomas Gillies, English instructor, read all the manuscripts turned in to the Collegian this semester.

Second place was won by Patricia Sebastian, Salem for her "Early Spring."

Third place was awarded to two men William Strobbe, Creston, Iowa, and James Miller, Salem.

All winning manuscripts will be submitted to national publications for further consideration.

King Richard I of England died of a shoulder wound inflicted by a crossbow bolt during the wars in France, a wound which was fatal because of unskilled treatment or his own lack of care.

Sailing vessels are classed according to the particular combination of spars, sail and cordage, and the words "cutter," "brig," or "ship," are really abbreviations for "cutter-rigged," "brig-rigged" and "ship-rigged."
