

Dunker Bowl

Appetizers for Party Are Concocted
By Each Guest to Suit His Taste

By Maxine Buren
Statesman Woman's Editor

"Dunker Bowls" are not new but they at last have been given a name. The dunker bowl is an aid to informal entertaining, where each guest makes his own appetizers. All you need is a bowl with some sort of spread that goes well on the assorted crackers, potato chips and thin rye bread which are placed around it in a chop plate.

The spread should be spicy and out of the ordinary such as:
SMOKED CHEESE WHIP
6 ounces smoked cheese food
1/4 cup cream or condensed milk,
whipped
1/4 teaspoon poppy seed or caraway seed
Softened cheese in bowl. Add whipped cream and caraway seed and whip together until smooth.

CRUNCHY LIVER SAUSAGE SPREAD
1/2 pound liver sausage
2 tablespoons grated onion
1/4 cup finely chopped celery
3 tablespoons sweet pickle juice
Mash sausage in bowl with fork. Add remaining ingredients and mix until blended and smooth.

An unusual container and spread is: Another quickie is a Braunschweiger boat. Have a piece of braunschweiger cut with diagonal ends so that the shortest length (about 6 or 7 inches) is at the top of the piece. Leave the braunschweiger in the casing so that what is not used will be protected from the air, preventing discoloration. Remove about a four-inch oval of casing from the middle of the top, and, using a fork, break up the meat beneath so that the guests can remove it easily. Cover the ends with finely chopped parsley and perhaps a lemon slice for added color. Serve the braunschweiger boat on a plate with crackers, olives and butter spreaders.

Congratulations go to Mr. and Mrs. Ollie Williams (Jean Moore) on the birth of a son, Bruce, on Friday at the Salem Memorial hospital. The baby's grandmothers are Mrs. George W. Moore of Salem and Mrs. Bertha Williams of Seattle.

Large sprays of white foliage with red assorted ornaments and red candles in crystal holders centered the long table. In the recreation hall was a lighted Christmas tree under which the gifts were placed for the girl in the Tuberculosis hospital. Favors were red cellophane cones filled with Christmas candy and the Santa Claus place cards were for Mr. and Mrs. Albert Gragg, Mr. and Mrs. Earl T. Andresen, Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Following the dinner Christmas carols were sung with Mrs. Andresen at the piano. George Veal entertained the group with impersonations and numbers on the cello. Prizes were won by Mrs. Frank Marshall, Mrs. Harry Humphreys, Albert Gragg and W. O. Green.

The participants are: Freddie Twedie, Ann Bagley, Linda Schei, Sue and Garry Zwicker, Tara Lama, Douglas Adams, Susan and Eldon Heringer, Jerry and Gary Neal, Gayle and Toni DeSart, Carol Ann Hudson, Judy Porter, Larry and Dennis Zuber, Judy Barry, Wanda Noel, Karen Covert, Valdene Arbi, Carlyle Hayes, Barbara Jean Smith, Jerry and Janice Goertzen, Wayne and Allen Simmons, Richard Claus, Roland Schirman, Mary Lou Hastings, Carol Stettler, Keith Lucas, Mary Jane Riches, Marlys Clark, Jerry Hunsaker, Barbara Garner, Roland Cannon, Elizabeth Tate, Diane Burkland, Barbara Callo-way, Eva Jean Miller, Natalie Cunningham, Mack and Paul Baker, Celia Weaver and Margaret Sanders.

Their identically styled frocks were of forest green velvet designed with rolled collars, buttons down the front, long sleeves and full skirts with peplums. They carried white carnation muffs and wore coronets of the same flowers in their hair.

The bride was a picture in her white satin gown as she walked down the candlelight aisle. The bodice was fashioned with a deep nylon net yoke and draped bertha. The sleeves were long and the full skirt terminated in a train with a double bustle at the waistline. For "something borrowed" she wore the five tiered veil of illusion which Mrs. John H. Johnson wore at her wedding. The veil cascaded from a braided satin coronet covered with the illusion and caught with orange blossoms at each side. Her bouquet was of white roses and stephanotis.

Rex Vollstedt of Albany stood with the groom as best man and seating the guests were Clifford Slaton, Albany, Allan Rice, Portland, and Frederick Deckerbach. For the daughter's nuptials Mrs. Bollinger selected a pastel aqua crepe gown, matching hat with feather trim and white gloves. Mrs. Vollstedt attended her son's marriage in a dusty rose crepe gown with silver beading at the waistline, a wine velvet hat with pink trim and white gloves. Their corsages were of white spray orchids.

When the couple left on their wedding trip the new Mrs. Vollstedt was wearing a titian rust wool gabarine suit, the jacket styled with flare back and antique buttons. Her feather hat and gloves matched her suit and her shoes and purse were of bronze kid. Her flowers were white orchids with bronze centers. The couple will spend a few days at the coast and after Christmas will go south to San Francisco and Carmel. After January 15 they will be at home in Albany.
