

Seen and Heard...

By IERYME ENGLISH

A WEEK OF TEAS . . . and there have been many holiday teas the past week, large and small ones . . . Wednesday afternoon Mrs. G. Herbert Smith and her attractive coed daughter, Sally, entertained informally at tea for Mrs. Robert E. Guild, the former Paulie Wallace, who is here during the holidays from Madison, Wis. . . . The hostesses both choosing black tea frocks . . . the honor guest in dove grey wool with narrow braid trim and her mother, Mrs. Paul Wallace, wearing black crepe . . .

Mother and daughter . . . so nice to see so many coming in . . . together . . . many of the girls home from college . . . Among them . . . Mrs. Robert E. Elstrom and Patricia . . . the latter opening the door and wearing a becoming rose pink taffeta frock . . . Mrs. Tinkham Gilbert and Alcega, who was at the door later in the afternoon and wearing black . . . Mrs. Hollis Huntington, Mrs. Crisp, who was chic in a brown ensemble with champagne satin trim . . . Mrs. L. C. McLeod and Irene, who wore brown with a plaid jacket . . . Mrs. Richard A. Meyer smartly dressed in a gunmetal grey suit with soft pink satin chapeau . . . her daughter, Roberta, serving in the dining room.

Still more . . . Mrs. George Alexander and Charlotte in a pretty black tea frock with low rounded neckline and rhinestone choker . . . her sister, Mrs. Edward O. Stadler, jr. in black with a shortie pink box coat . . . Mrs. John Carson and Jane . . . Mrs. Arthur Bates and Barbara . . . Mrs. Karl Becke attractive in a Christmas red outfit with matching hat with her two daughters, Marjorie, in black taffeta and Mrs. William Shinn . . . Mrs. Francis Wade and Corinne, who was receiving congratulations on announcement of her recent engagement . . . Corinne attractive in a brown figured taffeta frock . . . Best wishes also to newly engaged Pauline Morse, who received her diamond on Monday . . . she was wearing a pretty garnet red crepe frock with tiered skirt . . . Mrs. W. Wells Baum and Frances . . . Mrs. Henry Compton and her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Stuart Compton . . . and dozens more . . .

The decor . . . An all white tea table . . . the centerpiece of snapdragons, carnations and narcissus flanked by white tapers in crystal candelabras . . . A stunning bouquet of American Beauty roses on the piano . . . a wreath tied with a red bow above the mantle and at one end a musical shrine which plays carols . . . a gift to Margie and Sally Smith from their parents . . . Margie who assisted in the dining room, wore a becoming brown taffeta dress . . .

WELCOME HOME . . . for Mrs. Jerome Simkins, who returned to Salem in November from southern California, where the family has been living for several years . . . They have now purchased a country place ten miles out on the Liberty road . . . To honor Mrs. Simkins was the delightful informal tea on Tuesday for which Mrs. Donald A. Young was hostess at her Fairmount Hill home . . .

Guests serving themselves in the dining room where Mrs. Lawrence Goss of Stayton poured . . . dainty white lace Christmas trees with tiny gold balls and altar candles the centerpiece . . . the trees, which Mrs. Young made, always a few maribou feathers and at the tree top a cluster of fancy jeweled combs . . . red and green streamers extending from top to bottom . . . and a clever wood block base, painted with gay figures and designs by Mrs. Young . . . Sleigh bells ringing as the door opened . . . Handsome gold candelabras with chartreuse tapers and colored balls on the piano . . . The mantle festive with the lace trees and pale green altar candles . . . a cluster of silver bells arranged on one side of the mirror . . . and flanking the fireplace on the floor were two figures, "Joy and Jolly," on stands of silver bells and tinsel.

About the guests . . . Mrs. Simkins wearing a good-looking gunmetal grey suit and hat . . . Mrs. Carl Nelson's smart continental green suit highlighted with aligatour hat and purse . . . Mrs. Fred Moxley thrilled at having just talked to her daughter and husband, John and Edith Miller, who live in Columbus, Ohio . . . Mrs. Robert L. Jones, who enjoyed Christmas skiing at Mt. Hood and the festive parties at Timberline Lodge, smart in a black tulip wool dress with winter white hat adorned with a large flower at the side.

MOTHER-DAUGHTER tea on Tuesday for the Pi Beta Phi convalescing home from college during the holidays . . . The James T. Brand
