Salem high school band and orchestra will make their initial concert appearance of the year on January 21, at first in series of three programs. The other concerts are set for March 10 for orchestra and April 13 for band, all at Salem high school. The two organizations combine to make some 160 players.

The uniformed band will be under the direction of E. Donald Jessop, new instrumental supervisor of the Salem school, and Victor Palmason will direct the orchestra.

The concerts are being sponsored by the band parents, and funds are to go toward the uniform fund.

Season tickets are on sale by students of the high school, or may be purchased from the office of the high school, and children's tickets are set at half price.

The Band Parents association and the two musical organizations themselves have raised a large part of the $8000 cost of the uniforms and are working faithfully to liquidate the rest of this year.

Plans are to take the band to Portland several times during the year to exchange programs with Portland schools, and also to enter the district and state high school music contests.

Fabulous Emporium Goes Overboard To Entertain Women Bowl Fans

(Scorned by the sports department, this story was gladly accepted by the women's department—we think it's refreshing change from the run-of-the-mill sports reports. And not only that we'll bet we'll have wide man readership today too. Woman's Editor.)

By LARRY LAU
(WITH THE OREGON FOOTBALL TEAM, Dallas, Texas) — Oregon women here for the Cotton Bowl will tell you that Nieman-Marcus is not a store, but a state of mind or a state of grace. The attention shown by this fabulous emporium typifies the friendliness and spirit of welcome that has made Dallas a town not to be forgotten by the visiting Oregonians.

Wives of the players, coaches and University officials who arrived last week, were given large felt boots, delivered personally by special messengers from Nieman-Marcus. Inside each boot were numerous invitations to teas, style shows, and guided tours, plus a specially made all-silk scarf with tiny gold ring and cowboy boot.

Mrs. Jim Alken, wife of Oregon's head coach, remarked, "I've never seen such gorgeous Christmas decorations. White ostrich feathers and huge colored balls all over the store... it's breathtaking!"

Mrs. Ted Meland and Mrs. Norm VanBroeklin, wives of Oregon players, went through Nieman-Marcus the day after they arrived. "We found clothes here are generally a little cheaper," Mrs. Meland said, "but some of those prices... whew!"

When the special Portland train arrived in Dallas Friday afternoon, the Oregon rooters were met by buses specially chartered by Nieman-Marcus.

The group of nearly 200 Oregonians was conducted through the store by hostesses. After the tour the ladies were guests at a special style showing of dresses and coats.

They sell furniture, but only by the house or roomful. And hats... well, one gets an appointment to be shown the various Lily Dache, John Fredericks, and Hat-tie Carnegie creations.

In one department we were shown, what the ladies called, "simply beautiful" new spring dresses by Castillo and Dior, that ranged to $150. The ladies were shown a collection of specially designed jewelry that was almost mythical in its splendor. A canary yellow diamond at $9750, a $16,500 bracelet, and an 1 1/2 carat diamond ring at $28,600 brought no sales. They were nice trinkets.

We learned that Nieman-Marcus is the store perhaps most responsible for the "New Look." Recognizing the trend far in advance, they brought Christian Dior to Dallas from France for a style show in the spring of 1947.

We were shown a group of royal pastel minks, priced at $11,500 and up, and a few of the more casual Vicuna coats, at a miserly $650. Nieman-Marcus, we were advised, sells more mink coats than any other store in America.

The Oregon group visited the penthouse tearoom, and was greeted warmly by the director of the penthouse section, Adalyn Lindsey, who it turned out, comes from Portland, and is a graduate of the University of Oregon, class of 1936. "I can tell these Oregon women the minute they come into the room," she confided, "you know how?" "By their skins," she continued. "They all have such beautiful complexions. It's too dry out here for us to ever look that good."

Tillicum Dance Gala Affair

Over two hundred and fifty Tillicum club members and guests celebrated New Year's eve at a formal breakfast dance last night. The affair was held in the newly redecorated ballroom of the Marion hotel, where Glenn Williams and his orchestra played for dancing until 1 o'clock, when a buffet breakfast was served. A snack bar was a feature during the evening.

The ballroom was festive with clusters of colored balloons arranged in the windows, over the doorways and above the orchestra stand. Tables were arranged in cabaret style and were decorated with bells, poinsettias, silvered greens, holly, and many white and red tapers. Colorful hats, horns, confetti and serpentine were given as favors.

atives and friends. They will live in Salem where the groom will attend Willamette university when the February term begins.

On Thursday a homecoming party and reception was given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Hedges honoring the newlyweds. The rooms were decorated with holiday greenery and candles. Pictures were shown and games and cards were played. Later refreshments were served to 45 neighbors and friends.

Miss Mary Hilborn entertained at luncheon Friday afternoon at her South 20th street home for the Misses Hilda Lynch, Nellie Haagen, Helen Updegraf, Stella Bean, Mamie Phipps, Lillian Rosstad and Gladys Blackley.

Mrs. E. M. Doughton entertained informally at luncheon and bridge Friday afternoon at her North Summer street home for a few friends.

Jefferson — Mr. and Mrs. John Terhune and son, Raymond, left Thursday for Indio, Calif., where they will visit the Karl Steiwerts, who are spending the winter in the south, and then will go on to Long Beach to visit friends.

A Little About Weather

Rain, Sleet, Snow, Means Something More to the Farmer than Mere Chill

By Maxine Buren
Statesman Woman's Editor

ROLLING HILLS FARM—City folk are pretty much upset by the weather. If it rains they have to put on rubbers and carry an umbrella, if it freezes they have to bundle up, if it is too hot they have to go away up into the 90's the lawn may look a little droopy and so also the occupants of the house.

But weather really means something out here in the country. A good heavy rain may save a crop or lose a whole year's effort. It may mean that unexpected leaks appear in the chickenhouse roof, or that the creek becomes an individualist and changes its course.

A good heavy rain is often welcome, frequently not. But it always brings out high boots and a good rain hat—for farmers are outdoors people, and the stock must be fed and chores done no matter what.

Then take a freeze. Even a light frost in the fall means that summer vegetables look pretty chilly and may never recover their former good looks. A heavy freeze, especially one of several days duration usually wrecks havoc with automatic waterers and may mean a burst pipe or two. The electric pump takes a bit of pampering too—we don't wash our hands of the water system in rural areas.

The country is beautiful in the snow—and yet all is not romantic beauty for the farmer—especially if he neglected to buy enough chicken feed to last over the cold spell. Chickens have a way of clucking convincing disapproval when their tummies are empty. No labor union whips its employer into line any quicker than a hen, picketing her nest—too angry to lay an egg.

What weather is pleasant too. What city woman knows of the sunrise every morning, though she's up before daylight. Does she know that even in winter—especially in winter—the sun rises with a sensational show of color? Does she ever see the sun's awakening heralded by a bright yellow glow atop the tips of high trees on the hill to the westward? Does she know the thrill of bare black oaks making lacy silhouettes against a fire-red morning sky?

And what do city folk know about the real beauty of a rainy day? Those days that veil the hills in a mystic gray chiffon of Oregon mist.

Oh, there's nothing more desirable
