England Is Subject for Speaker

With a fine balance of humor and seriousness Miss Mabel P. Robertson gave over a hundred members of the American Association of University Women and guests on Saturday afternoon, a resume of the English portion of her summer trip to Europe.

With Evan Boise, son of the Breyman Boises, Miss Robertson spent a month in England, another in France, and an extra week in Italy. She covered only their motor trip through the English countryside and their stay in London in her talk following lunch at the Marion hotel Saturday.

Because of her background as a teacher of history, her talk was made doubly fascinating through familiarity with the history of the various spots.

Miss Robertson included impressions of Plymouth, Stratford and Oxford. Of the latter she said that on one side of a great arch is a modern and very noisy city, while just beyond, the curious traveler sees a quiet pasture with grazing cattle. This is true of all England, she said. She discussed the city of Bristol at some length, telling of the hilltop, dedicated to the "old maids of Bristol" on which they might hang their wash.

The pair ate potted chicken from their lunchbox in Kensington gardens, attended service in many of the cathedrals including Canterbury and visited Hastings and Dover.

England she found orderly and neat, with no taudriness and no litter. She was particularly impressed with the honesty of the people and their respect for the property of others. Telephone books were safe in the booths, theater binoculars were available at the seats, and none were molested.

She touched on the food situation, the English attitude toward the present government, the health of the people.

Londoners, she said, show the result of long privation more than the people of the rural districts. Women and children are more poorly fed than the men, because of a necessity for the former to sacrifice food to the family breadwinner.

She found England a charming country, regardless of the fact that during her stay she had only one egg and few meats either of known or unknown origin. "I would return to England for another visit right now, if I could," she concluded.

During the brief AAUW business session, announcement was made of the scheduling for March 3, of the two Lowell Thomases with their film, "Around the World in Color" and of the national AAUW convention in Seattle on June 20 to 24.

Mrs. Raymond Walsh will discuss modern films and review "The Snake Pit" and Mrs. Blanche Jones will tell of Paul Green's contribution to the theatre and read his "No-Count Boy" at a meeting of the Theatre Arts group on Monday. Mrs. Ann S. Anderson will be hostess for the group at her home on route 8, for a desert luncheon beginning at one o'clock.

Mrs. Conrad Paulson will open her Court street home to members of St. Anne's Guild of St. Paul's Episcopal church Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Assisting hostesses at the tea hour will be Mrs. Everett deWeese, Mrs. Charles McClelland, Mrs. Kenneth Power, Mrs. Fred Moxley, Mrs. George Nelson, Mrs. John S. Lochard and Mrs. Sydney Kromer.
