Your Health

Written by Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, M.D.

In elderly people there is often a slowing down of the circulation, particularly in the legs. This is especially true when varicose veins are present, that is, veins which are enlarged or dilated. This slowing down of the circulation may lead to the development of so-called leg ulcers. These are deep sores in which there is loss of tissue. Because of the circulatory difficulty, these ulcers do not heal as they should. Often they become infected.

But medical science is always advancing, and it is encouraging to note that recently a method of treatment has been described which seems to give good results in many instances. It is rapid, and requires only a short period of inactivity for the patient.

First Step

The first step taken in the treatment of the leg ulcer is the giving of injections of scarring substances around the varicose vein to eliminate them. Next, the ulcer is cleaned and antiseptics applied, and the patient is kept at rest in bed. Then, daily injections of penicillin into a muscle is started. At the same time, injections of a local anesthetic are given.

The frequency of the injections of the local anesthetic depends upon the extent of the ulcer and the relief of symptoms obtained. Often, it is found necessary to give only two or three injections at intervals of two or three days. If the ulcers are deep or extensive, the injections of local anesthetics are given daily.

It was noted, in several cases treated, that the ulcer begins to heal within a few days, that the skin surrounding it regains normal appearance, and that the pain disappears. In the cases mentioned, the disorder recurred in only two instances, and these two responded at once to a second course of treatment. One had been treated for six months by other means, with no effect. With the treatment described, it cleared up within several weeks.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

R.K.: What is the treatment for undulant fever?

Answer: Many cases are benefited by the use of streptomycin, together with one of the sulfonamide drugs.

With proper hygiene and plenty of rest, the condition, in most cases, clears up.

Hollywood On Parade

By Gene Handaker

HOLLYWOOD—Richard Basehart, rising movie villain, quit a newspaper job in his native Zanesville, Ohio, because he couldn't stand the incidental gore. One Saturday night, as a cub reporter on the "Times-Signal" police beat, he had to identify the bullet-riddled body of a man he had met. The experience made him ill.

So what happens to him in the movies? In "He Walked by Night," he kills a cop in cold blood, wounds another, and tromps viciously on the hand of a near-sighted man groping for his glasses. In "Cry Wolf," he tried to strangle Barbara Stanwyck, leaving her arms so black and blue she had to wear long-sleeved dresses for a week. In "Repeat Performance" he shot Louis Hayward.

Basehart, 31, is blue-eyed, tight-lipped, and red-haired with sideburns. From newspaper reporting he turned to bill-collecting for a loan company. He went around to dun a hotel porter. "It took everything he had to scrape together a dollar a week," Dick says. There were other harsh cases, like fathers of six or seven kids who had obtained loans in good times but were now on WPA. So after three months, Dick quit that job, too, and tried the theater.

But as Robespierre, in the screen's forthcoming "Reign of Terror," he orders Arlene Dahl strung up by the thumbs. In "Roseanna McCoy," he'll kill several persons and start a feud. I asked whether he suffers any

Silverton Fire Department Seeks New Equipment

SILVERTON, Jan. 18 — A committee of firemen from the local department appeared before the city council Monday night at a special meeting of that group, and discussed the department's needs both immediate and future. On the committee were Carlton Hande, Lloyd Larsen, R. A. Fish and L. F. Tucker.

Major new equipment included a fire truck with larger pumping capacity and proper housing for the trucks.

Following discussion, the councilmen, headed by Mayor C. H. Weiby, met to work out definite recommendations and to present these in writing to the council. Approximately $2000 is received annually from the Silverton rural fire protection area and this is applied on equipment.

No other business was transacted at the council meeting. The next regular meeting of the council falls on February 7.
