Smut Believed No. 1 Enemy To Wheat Men

Dupont de Ne...1871/2 Penney J C

Smut, the number one wheat disease problem in the northwest, stood its ground in 1948 as a menace to the industry, members of the Pacific Northwest smut control committee learned in a recent Portland meeting.

Robert E. White, PMA grain supervisor, Portland, told committee members that 14.1 per cent of 17,444 federal grain samples taken in Oregon, Washington and Idaho during the 1948 harvest season graded smutty. An identical smut figure was registered on samples from the 1947 crop. Infestation Increases Short cuts in seed treatment for smut are responsible for much of the disease spread, believes Rex Warren, Oregon State college extension farm crops specialist.

A member of the smut control committee, Warren states that smut infestation on two popular Oregon Polk County Group alarming jump in 1948. There was some improvement in hard red winter and common white wheats to offset the smut increase in the two white club varieties. Smuty wheat in the northwest was at an all-time low in 1942 when just 2.8 per cent of the federal samples graded smutty. Condon Is Sore Spot

The shift to more nonresistant wheats such as Aliel and Elgin in Harland and Joe Rogers, Inde- style Oregon has aggravated the smut problem, Warren states. In four Sherman, Moro and Gilliam - 34 per cent of the 1948 Alicel and Elgin's samples graded smutty. In 1947 samples from the same wheats were 25.2 per cent smutty.
