Your Health

Written by Dr. Herman N. Bundensen, M.D.

There are many glands located in different parts of the body and they have important functions to carry on. Then, too, there are some glands that are found only in the male and some that are found only in the female.

One of the glands in the male is called the prostate gland. When chronic inflammation of his prostate gland occurs, as a rule it becomes worse unless it is adequately treated.

More than two-thirds of the cases of prostate gland trouble are due to such causes as infections in the urinary tract, inflammation of the channel leading from the bladder to the outside, or blocking of this channel.

Due to Infections

Then, too, many cases are due to infections in other parts of the body, such as the teeth, tonsils, or sinuses. Oftentimes, this condition may be present without causing any symptoms. In many instances, however, there is some discharge noticeable in the morning. There is some itching. In order to make a definite diagnosis, it is necessary to examine the secretion from the prostate gland under the microscope for pus cells and germs. Examination should also be made to see if there is enlargement of the prostate gland.

The most important part of the treatment of a chronic prostate infection is massage of the prostate gland. The massage is carried out at intervals of three to four days for six to eight treatments, as a rule. Then, a rest period of four to six weeks is permitted before further massage is carried out. This massage is done through the rectum. Usually, not more than two or three courses of massage, together with other measures, are required to clear up the condition.

Of course, if there is any blocking of the passage from the bladder to the outside as a result of scar tissue formation, this must be overcome by surgery if necessary.

Helpful Drug

Drug treatment is helpful, particularly the sulfonamide preparations and penicillin. Both preparations may be used in the more severe cases.

A careful search should be made for infections in the teeth, tonsils and elsewhere in the body that might lead to prostate gland infection, and, if any are discovered, they should be eliminated.

Because this condition so often does not produce noticeable or severe symptoms, there is a tendency for patients to neglect it. However, it is important that, once it is discovered, it be promptly and thoroughly treated in order to keep it from becoming more severe and leading to complications.

Hollywood On Parade

HOLLYWOOD — Glenn Ford says his wife Eleanor Powell's appearance at the Palladium in London had better be her last professional excursion. "Or," Glenn growls, "you'll see me with a new spouse. I've forgotten what Elly looks like." The dancing Mrs. Ford, who recently appeared in eastern night clubs, starts a month's engagement at the English music hall March 9.

Ran into Glenn at the cocktail party opening of a brand new Beverly Hills silver store. There were Martha Raye (sipping gin with grapefruit-juice chaser), Jeanne Cagney, an always charming person, and others surrounded by a quarter-million bucks' worth of silver in showcases. You'd like a sauce tureen made in 1729 by London's Paul de Lamerie? It's yours for $1,760. Or four open saltcellars for $3,500? In a pinch they'd even double as ash trays. Saw Moutha Raye, in a silver-blue mink cape, clowning for the photogs in an imitation replica of an English crown. Eddie O'Brien, Olga San Juan, Audrey Totter, Andrea King, Una Merkel, and Roddy McDowall came to gape at the collection. Incidentally, the proprietress, Sallye Silver, vows that that's her real monicker, not one she adopted for crass commercial causes . . .

Gawking elsewhere around Glammerville of late, I've seen—Director Andre DeToth sporting a violent Florida tan after three weeks on location with "Slattery's Hurricane" . . . Celeste Holm, as a French nun in "Come to the Stable," learning to say a mealtime prayer in Latin — with a French accent . . . Bossman Darryl Zanuck puffing a cigar just somewhat smaller than a baseball bat as he strode rapidly across the 20th Century-Fox lot . . .

Bob Preston gloating, "I'm finally getting around to the kind of role I like"— in "The Lady Gambles" with B. Stanwyck. "In this story," he explains, "some one else is having all the trouble" . . . Marie Windsor trying to roll a cigarette for a scene in "Hellfire" and getting too much makin's heaped across the paper . . . Brian Donlevy groaning that it probably will cost him $3,000 for a dental bridge. The tooth was knocked out in an "Impact" fight sequence . . . Sterling Hayden trying to convince me that he finds it really swell living on his 50-foot schooner at San Pedro harbor with his wife and baby. There's no electricity aboard, and he must drive 20 miles; through heavy traffic, to and from work in "Manhandled" . . .

A movie-acting cow catching sight of herself in Loretta Young's mirror—and mooing mournfully. "Don't worry, Bossy," Loretta consoled; "I always feel that way myself."

Oysters spawn between May and September, and fewer oysters are sold then in order to conserve the supply.
