Hollywood On Parade

By Gene Handaker
HOLLYWOOD—Hope springs eternal in the breasts of trumpet players, impersonators, accordionists, actors, dancers, and comedians. I watched about 60 of 'em knocking at fame's door the other afternoon trying out for a spot on "Don Ameche's Talent Show" ("Your Lucky Strike") heard five days a week on CBS.

A tenor moaned pitifully with agonized gestures; he didn't get on. A slick-haired musician played three clarinets at once; he did. An impersonator made like Charles Laughton as Captain Bligh; he got the nod, too.

About half the applicants at these Wednesday auditions are booked for broadcast appearances. Genial autocrat of the auditions is white-haired Leighton Brill, who has been watching performers grasp at fame's rungs for a generation. Today he sees a difference: aspirants are more serious.

"They're better trained," he told me between a pianist and a xylophonist. "The old-time chorus girl did a time step and went out after the show. Today she couldn't get through the first audition. Today's chorus girls don't go out nights. She has ballet lessons in the mornings, singing lessons in the afternoons. She's more interested in her career than in snagging a husband."

For four years, Brill has been talent picker here for Rogers and Hammerstein shows. To illustrate how tough show business is to crack: last year he auditioned 728 singers, dancers, and actors for "Show Boat," "Annie, Get Your Gun" and other Broadway and road productions. Only 28 got jobs.

Brill's advice to ambitious beginners: "Get early training. Have some training in dancing, even if you're a singer. Dancing improves your posture, shows you what to do with your hands. We find people with wonderful voices who don't know how to walk across a stage. And finally, get on a stage—high school, little theatre, or what not."

I talked to some of the aspirants in the lobby. Miami Caffery, 27, is the Paris-born second cousin of U.S. Ambassador Jefferson Caffery. A wartime WASP test pilot in Kansas, she hopes to continue professionally the singing she did for Army shows. Ex-Paratrooper Roy Goodrich, Jr., of Bradford, Pa., chose singing in preference to his father's hardware business. Margit Fischer, 26, formerly in a Broadway chorus, is a restaurant cashier-hostess nights. Daytimes, she pursues a singing career. "Show business is tough," she admitted, but her smile showed she loves it.

Congress May Pigeonhole Fair Deal Bills

By Jack Bell
WASHINGTON, Feb. 14 (AP)—The democratic congress began its seventh week Monday amid indications that it may pigeonhole part of President Truman's legislative program.

Price declines appeared about to cut the ground from under Mr. Truman's request for standby price—wage controls and add to arguments against the imposition of $4,000,000,000 in new taxes, which he urges.

His proposal for governmental authority to build steel plants—under heavy republican attack—also seems likely to be undermined by further drop occurs in business indices.

For other reasons, democratic lawmakers also were putting in the doubtful category Mr. Truman's requests for universal military training and for congressional approval of the proposed St. Lawrence seaway.

Mr. Truman however still insists that standby price control power and $4,000,000,000 in new taxes are just as necessary now as when he first asked for them.

But the house ways and means committee has set the administration's tax bill aside for consideration at the "proper time."

Taylor's Body Back in U.S.

The body of First Lt. Benjamin A. (Bud) Taylor, son of Mrs. Helen B. Taylor, 1370 Nebraska st., has arrived in the United States for burial, the army disclosed Monday.

Taylor was killed Dec. 22, 1944, in a plane crash near Hamabury, England. His is one of 175 bodies returned aboard the SS Atenas from military cemeteries at Brookwood and Cambridge.

The youth attended Parrish junior high school and Sacred Heart academy here and was employed for six years by Salmen Linen company. He learned to fly at the local airport and enlisted in the Royal Air force in the summer of 1941. On his first operational flight over Germany with the American Eagle squadron, he was wounded. Later in 1942, he and other members of the squadron joined the American air forces.

ing and accommodate some 500 small fishing boats, is now under construction.

Fay Plank, Toledo, who was awarded the building contract, said he expects to complete the work this winter. The postwar moorage will be made of bomb-bay tanks from B-29s.

Your Health

Written by Dr. Herman N. Bandersen, M.D.

By Herman N. Bandersen, M.D.
We all know that as yet the exact cause of cancer has not been determined, but we are making great strides in this condition. What we do already know about cancer is that there are a number of factors which seem to contribute to its development. Almost half of the cancer deaths which occur are due to cancer of the stomach. With the early discovery of this condition and operation, facilities may often be prevented. Hence, it is important to know the early symptoms of this condition. When any of them develop an immediate examination by a physician should be carried out, and this should be done without a moment's delay.

The early symptoms of cancer of the stomach include some type of digestive upset. Sometimes, sickness at the stomach and vomiting occur. The vomited matter may contain material that has a "coffee ground appearance, which is due to hemorrhage in the stomach.

Making a Diagnosis
An X-ray examination should be carried out immediately when symptoms of stomach cancer are present, since an X-ray study is most helpful in making a diagnosis.

Dr. Andrew C. Ivy, of the University of Illinois, thinks that very hot foods may contribute to the development of stomach cancer. Eating hot foods may injure the lining membrane of the stomach. Food that has a temperature of 122 degrees F. or more can damage the tender tissues of the stomach wall, some persons drink liquid which

In certain tests made by Dr. Ivy, was as hot as 131 degrees F. or higher, and it is sound advice that too hot food should not be eaten—not even sipped.

Chronic or long-continued irritation of the stomach from any cause makes it more likely that stomach cancer will develop.

There is also some idea that a lack of acid in the stomach may be a contributing factor to the development of stomach cancer. However, this has by no means been definitely proved. The amount of acid present can be found by pumping out the stomach contents and testing it for the amount of acid present.

Cancer of the stomach is more common in men than in women. On the other hand, it is known that men form more acid in the stomach than women. This also would seem to contradict the idea that low acid would lead to the development of cancer. It has been suggested that the reason more cancer develops in men than in women may be because men are more careless in their eating habits.

Since it is known that the use of hot liquids and foods may cause stomach irritation and predispose to the development of cancer, it is suggested that such practice be strictly avoided.
