Captained by a pair of eight-round main events, both in the 150this week, after five games, three of which will have a definite bearing pound class, Matchmaker Tex Salkeld's 28-round fistic show will be on the 1949 pennant winner. The Lewis & Clark Pioneers, with only pitched tonight at the armory, starting at 8:30 o'clock. The dual main-Pacific to play Friday night, can clinch no worse than a tie for the er will be backed by a trio of four-rounders. The entire show has been drawing more interest among the fans the past week than any one of the last three gloved shin-digs Salkeld has installed here.

In the feature scrap, Salem's Dean Abney steps forth in his first role as a main eventer. The hard-working Dean, a much improved fighter in recent weeks under Handlers Manny Morrell and George Masters. goes in with Paul Kennedy, the muscular and capable negro lad from Longview with whom he wafted to a fourround draw in a corking battle on a Portland talent show a few weeks back. Kennedy downed Abney for a nine count in the second round, but Dean came bouncing back to earn a tie.

The second half of the double feature puts Dick Wolfe, the highly-rated Klamath Falls Indian prospect on with Al Cliff, rugged Portlander who lost to Abney via decision here two weeks ago. Wolfe is regarded as one of the better fistic prospects now operating in the state, and if both he and Abney can smack out wins tonight they'll no doubt be matched together on the next show.

Hoping his prelim action is as rip-snorting as it was on the last show, Salkeld has lined up the ing clash of their annual civil war series at Eugene Friday night.
