Your Health

Written by Dr. Herman N. Sanderson, M.D.

Recently a survey was made to find out just what conditions brought people most often to their doctor's office and it was interesting to note that infection and inflammation in the outer ear canal was one of the common conditions. Frequently, the difficulty is due to infection with germs, as well as with a fungus or mold, like ringworm. Therefore, in treating this condition, steps must be taken to eliminate both the germs and the fungi.

One of the first things the doctor does in treating this condition consists in keeping the ear canal clean. The only way to do this is by washing it, using a large metal ear syringe. After washing, the canal must be thoroughly dried. Of course, this cleaning process must be carried out by the physician; it sometimes takes as long as 20 minutes to do the job thoroughly.

Piece of Cotton
When there is only a moderate amount of inflammation and a small amount of swelling in the ear, the doctor places a piece of cotton covered with sulphathiazole ointment in the ear canal. The cotton should fill the ear canal without causing any painful pressure.

If there is a great deal of swelling of the ear canal and there are pimples present, X-ray treatment may be advisable.

If the lymph glands near the ear are enlarged as a result of the infection, it may be advisable to give sulphathiazole by mouth.

When the infection with germs has been overcome, treatment for the underlying fungus infection may be started. Again thorough washing is advisable. Following this, ear drops containing bichloride of mercury are often used. The ear drops may be put in by the patients themselves, morning and evening.

Washing Ear Canal
For the first two or three days, washing of the ear canal is necessary; then it may be done at three-day intervals; then at five-day intervals, and finally at weekly visits. It is suggested that the ear drops be used twice a week for a month after the condition is apparently cleared up.

Patients with ear canal infections are cautioned against swimming and against letting water enter the ear when taking a shower bath.

Should the condition recur, the treatment should be used a second time.

Sometimes the fungus which causes the condition is one known as Aspergillus Niger. In this condition, salicylic acid in alcohol is used instead of the bichloride of mercury.

Of course, all of these conditions should be cared for by a physician.

R.L.O.: Will you please tell me what causes a tight feeling on top of the head?
Answer: This symptom is probably due to some nerve disorder.

Hollywood On Parade

By Gene Handsaker
HOLLYWOOD — William Bendix sniffs some flowers in "The Life of Riley" and cries, "The aroma of this odor smells wonderful!" Later, while describing a conversation, he says, "I'm quotin' him verboten!"

That's Bendix as Chester A. Riley—clumsy, slow-witted, subtle as a battering ram, and completely likeable. The picture is based on Bendix' weekly radio program. The comedy is half-slapstick and as preview reports proved, plentiful.

Riley is the original big-hearted, tough-luck guy. He struggles to support his family on a welder's pay, dodges the landlady, and borrows from his son's piggy bank to take the family to dinner. John Brown plays his radio role as Digger O'Dell, the friendly undertaker. "You may not like flowers at first," he points out, "but eventually they'll grow on you."

Rosemary DeCamp, Bill Goodwin, and James Gleason join in the fun, and Newcomer Meg Randall and Richard Long are an appealing romantic team.

"Red Canyon" is a frequently exciting western that should boost Howard Duff's movie stock considerably. Duff, the gruff-voiced Private Detective Sam Spade of the radio, plays a tough lone wrangler who sets out to capture a wild horse. When he does, in the wild and beautiful canyon around Kanab, Utah, Ann Blyth is the only one who can ride the beast. But George Brent, her father, forbids her to ride the mustang against his own entry in the big annual race.

The horse-hunt is exciting, though the whinies become a little deafening, and the race is even more stirring. Duff is forceful, Miss Blyth is beautiful in color, and Edgar Buchanan is funny as the old coddler who says things like, "Well, I'll be bumfuzzed."

In "The Bride" Ava Gardner, John Hodiak, Charles Laughton, and Vincent Price are mixed up in some obscure graft on a Central American island. Something about stolen scrap metal and airplane motors. Robert Taylor, as a U.S. government agent, is sent to catch the mob. In the process, he falls in love with Ava.

The most interesting sequence is of Taylor out swordfishing. Later there's some gunplay and a chase amid fireworks—spectacular but awfully contrived. Miss Gardner comes out of a clinch with Taylor and addresses him as "Rigby," his last name in the story. People just don't go around kissing before getting to call each other by their first names, do they? Laughton mugs amusingly, but it's a pretty dull picture.
