

Don't Look Now...

but... we're in the pink this week. With a favorite, but not-to-be-trusted-in-the-machine pair of red pajamas put into the wash by mistake, we are living a colorful life. We don't mind too much the pink tea towels, the formerly yellow pajamas now peach, or the pink pillow slips, but there's something about one pink dotted swiss curtain among half a dozen white ones that doesn't exactly please us.

This way and that... We did enjoy so much watching the little tugboats fussing around a very large log raft the other day. One little tug pulled it downstream, another little tug tried to pull it upstream but of course that was silly, so downstream the one scuppered and just to prove that even a little put-put can push a big raft, it put its little nose right in the middle of a big log and pushed and pushed. Then, turning around and flipping its tail, it sped off up the river looking for more rafts to bully. We always wanted a little tugboat for our own, we could have so much fun pushing things around.

All wet... Whoever expected that only Spring could Open on Thursday night, they had a Sky Opening too.

Tired waiting... We had hoped to get the lovely watch offered by one of the jewelry stores as a prize last night. You see, we lost our wristwatch in 1923 and guess we'll just have to give up expecting to find it.

Slight change... we note by a sign-board that snuff is "the tasty way to take tobacco." Wonder if the T shouldn't be changed to an N... Maxine Buren.
