CVA Proposal Topic of Panel Talk at Campus

By James Oakes
Statesman Campus Correspondent

An enthusiastic audience of 90 people turned out to participate in Willamette university's Philosophy club's "Social and Political Implications of CVA" form at Waller hall last night which was highlighted by four panel discussion speakers.

The program, which was extended a half hour over its one-and-a-half hour imposed limit, had Monroe Sweetland, democratic national committeeman of Newport and Howard Morgan, democratic state representative from Multnomah county, supporting CVA and Brig. Gen. Thomas M. Robins, retired Bonneville dam construction engineer and James V. Collins, national Young Republican committeeman, against.

Sweetland said that if the north-west passed up President Truman's proposed CVA, they would be guilty of throwing away a historical opportunity to better the lot of their area. Collins said that all material gains of CVA would be realized but at the cost of public civil liberties.

Figures were brought out by the other two participants. Morgan, who led off the discussion, said the Columbia region had one-half of U. S. power potential but was producing only one-half of the TVA output which he said has 22 dams to the Columbia's three. Robins said since 1933, power output on the Columbia area had increased 523 per cent and revenues 477 per cent as compared with TVA's 228 and 86 per cent respectively.

The forum was moderated by Dean Robert D. Gregg of Willamette, who introduced the speakers, moderated questions between them and changed questions from the audience to them. Gregg took over the floor after a formal introduction by Donald Yocum, Philosophy club president.
