The quake rocked northwestern Oregon, extending as far south as Eugene, Coos Bay, and Reedsport, and as far east as Prineville and La Grande. Roseburg, Klamath Falls, Pendleton, and farther disant cities did not feel it.

The Tillamook county court house cracked slightly. Cans tumbled from grocery shelves in many towns. Dozens of bottles of chemicals splintered in the Reed college laboratory. The Beaverton schools closed after wide, chinks opened in building facades.

Telephone lines were jammed with householders reporting broken dishes, glasses and preservejars. The flood of calls disrupted some telephone circuits tempora-

Power Line Out

An 11,000-volt power line was knocked out for half an hour, blacking out suburban and business sections of Portland. Tobling bricks crashed through several automobile windows in a downtown Portland parking lot. Rocks rained down on the Spokane, Portland and Seattle railroad line between Portland and Seaside, halting traffic temporarily. Earth slides occurred in some areas, but no highway damage was reported.

Two Astoria stores' basements flooded when the quake broke water pipes. The Seaside schools closed as a precautionary measure.
