Job Picture Becoming More Problematic; Farm Labor Supply Seen as Improved

A better seasonal farm labor supply this year and mounting employment problems in Oregon were predicted here Monday by officials who returned from an employment service conference in Phoenix, Ariz.

Employment problems related to the 40 per cent increase in population in the far west since 1940 were discussed by officials and staff members of unemployment compensation agencies of 10 western states.

Representing Oregon at the sessions were T. Morris Dunne, chairman; L. O. Arens, commissioner; Silas Gaiser, administrator, and Ellis H. Jones, informational representative, all of the state UCC, who were back at their desks here Monday.

trator, and Ellis H. Jones, informational representative, all of the state UCC, who were back at their desks here Monday.

"With the number of jobs dropping markedly this winter for the first time since the later '30's, we are concerned over the ability of our industry, agriculture and trade, to absorb the new population," Gaiser explained Monday.

"Although Oregon has had the highest rate of increase in population, according to the census bureau, we found other states, particularly in the southwest, having even greater employment problems — mainly because construction and other industries based on tourist needs have fallen off."

At Phoenix, said Gaiser, the Oregon delegation learned that with Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Louisiana reporting labor surpluses a "greater than usual" immigration to Oregon may be expected this year.

The supply of farm laborers is expected to be greater this year than for the past several years, the commission reported Monday. Despite the fact that nearly 3,000 in this district have gone to work during the past nine weeks a total of 2,524 were still unemployed last week in the Salem area. Last year at this time only 1,424 were on the unemployment rolls.

Sunset Highway Crash Kills Elderly Couple

HILLSBORO, April 18—(P)—Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Lind, an elderly Cornelius farm couple, were killed today as they drove off the North Plains road onto the Sunset highway.

Their old car was struck by another automobile which was driving eastward on the Sunset highway. The driver of that car, Albert L. Quebbeman, Imbler, Ore., escaped injury, but four members of his family were hurt.

'Tourist Host' Week Scheduled

Importance of the tourist business in Oregon was emphasized by Gov. Douglas McKay Monday, when he urged that the period of

The Statesman, Salem, Oregon, Tuesday, April 19, 1949—5

May 2 to 8 be set aside as "Tourist Host Week."

"It is important that our tourists be well taken care of and informed on what to do and where to go while they are in this state," Governor McKay said. "These tourists will expect courteous service, fair prices, and good accommodations."

There are about 2,000 different species of the frog and toad family of tailless amphibians.
