HOMES FOR AMERICANS

AMERICAN tradition keeps the Cape Cod design popular for the small house. Since western states were settled by pioneers from the east, it is not inappropriate to find this colonial theme far from Massachusetts. Here is one in the midwest. It is Design 6R-34 by Architect Elmer Gylleck, 1201/2 So. Grove Ave., Elgin, Ill. This storyand-a-half cottage is in the "economy house" class. It has a ground area of less than 748 square feet without the porch, yet contains 18,700 cubic feet with a complete basement. The neat stair railing shown is an example of attractive stock designs of millwork available now for small dwellings. The architect suggests an exterior of stone veneer, or random ashlar concrete blocks, with a roof of asphalt shingles. The house can be heated with a forced warm air plant. The den on the first floor can be used as a third bedroom.
