1948 Cattle, Calf Production in Oregon 6th Highest on Record

Sixth largest production of cattle and calves in Oregon on record was in 1948, figures released Friday by the United States Department of Agriculture show. Total production was 264 million pounds. This was down 4 per cent under 1947 but 6 per cent above the 10-year average.

While the gross income to Oregon farmers from cattle and calves in 1949 was $9 per acre, below 1947, it exceeded 1948 prior to that as the prices received in 1948 were the highest on record. Small-cow marketing than the previous year resulted in the decreased cash receipts.

Slaughter cattle prices have been strengthening for the past two weeks at both western and midwestern markets. At Portland top steers were bringing $26 this week. This is within 25 cents of the year's top at Portland, reached near mid-April. Medium steers at Portland this past week ranged from $22.50 to $24, holding that way to Friday. Common grades went for from $20 to $22.50. Good heifers continued to bring $23.50 to $24. Good cows are worth $20 to $21.50. Medium grades $17.50 to $19.50.

Vealers weakened on Wednesday at Portland and dropped one to two dollars. At the close of the week (Friday) good and choice grades were $26 to $30 ranging down to common grades at $14 to $22.

Hog production on Oregon farms was down 2 per cent in 1948 from a year earlier but far below the high production of the war years. The number of hogs marketed during the past year by Oregon farmers was the smallest for many years and the price received was slightly below the record high for 1947.

The price of hogs has been holding steady during the past week, climbing slightly toward the close of this week. Feeder pigs made the biggest climb, going up 50 cents to $1 compared to last week. Top price this week was $23. Reports show that the cool dry weather in Oregon has not been entirely favorable to lambs and the early lambs have not made the gains usually expected, and not sufficiently to completely overcome the serious setback from the severe winter. Prices so far this year have continued to soar. At Portland this week to bring lambs reached $28, a new high for this market. Shorn yearlings have ranged from $18 to $21 for medium to good grades.
