

Gardening Today

By Lillie L. Madsen

With June, the Oregon rose month, just around the corner more attention is turning toward rose care. However, if this care hasn't been given, it is better to begin on for some months' chances are the gardeners will have no roses for the approaching shows.

P. W. Stone of the Portland Rose Society says that the best time to start on rose care is in the early spring. He says that the best time to start on rose care is in the early spring. He says that the best time to start on rose care is in the early spring.

in alkaline carrier such as lime. This may be purchased ready to use. The durometer is used when the temperature is over 70 degrees as lime does not sulfate readily at lower temperatures. Nectine is a contact insecticide and must actually touch the insect to kill it.

Lead arsenate will control the rose slug. The spray should get on the underside of the leaves. Use two gallons of water to a 10 percent lead arsenate dust. Use 1/2 ounce of Nectine to a gallon of water. It is important to spray the underside of the leaves. It is important to spray the underside of the leaves.

There are a number of spray and dust materials that will control the three major diseases: blackspot, mildew and rust. If properly applied, because of the convenience of handling with simple, inexpensive equipment and the speed with which applications can be made, many rose gardeners use dust during the summer. For an all purpose dust good results can be had from formalin.

Rose show, Crystal Gardens. Questions and Answers

Mrs. P. R. asks if there is any "horticultural talk" at the National Council of Garden clubs or if the meetings are made up of "talk reports, food and elections."

Ans: There is a very fine "horticultural forum" at the assembly room in Multnomah hotel arranged for Monday, May 23, 8:30 p.m. The program includes Fred Edmunds, curator of the International Rose Test Gardens, Portland, "How We Grow Them in Oregon"; Mrs. L. N. Levy, editor of American Primrose Society Quarterly; Primrose Dr. E. J. Kraus on Hybridizing Christmases for Hardiness.

Central Howell eighth graders will be held on Friday evening, May 17th, at eight o'clock. Mrs. Marguerite Burton, Marion county school supervisor will deliver the address.

To be graduated are Dorothy Edwards, Gloria Jarmin, Joanne Roth, Elmer Haury, Karl Rehm, and Dean Way. Five of the young people have gone all the way through the grades together, the other a recent resident Mrs. Betty Sanders is the instructor.

The annual Central Howell picnic will be held on Saturday, May 28, to which all patrons and friends are cordially invited. A basket dinner will be served at noon with ball games featuring the program in the afternoon. The main attraction will be the game between the fathers and sons, an annual event. Children will return to school on Tuesday, May 31, for their report cards, which will end this term of school. The two teachers, Mrs. Sanders, upper grade teacher and principal, and Mrs. Nema McClure have been rehired for next year.

Little Lucy Rickard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Rickard of this community, was accidentally hit by an automobile near the Central Howell store and severely injured while on her way to school. She was rushed to the Silvertown hospital where her condition is still serious. No bones were broken but it is feared there is a concussion.

Silvertown to Decide Water Bond Proposal in Election Tuesday

SILVERTOWN — A battle, promising to be one of the most heated in Silvertown's history, is steadily growing warmer as Tuesday, May 24, special election day, approaches. The election will be held at the city hall from 8 a. m. to 8 p. m.

The issue is a proposed $90,000 general obligation bond issue for improvement of the Silvertown water system. A portion of the amount would be for a new concrete dam 3600 feet above the present pumping station on the Astoria and the remainder for additional pipeline and replacement pipe.

The present city council composed of Mayor C. H. Weiby, Errol Ross, George Christensen, Robert Allen, Alvin Legard, George Weisner and Lloyd Fry have gone on record as unanimously approving the proposal.

Taking the opposing side are members of the pre-managership form of city government headed by Dr. A. W. Simmons, veterinarian and former chairman of the now discontinued water commission.

Circulars have been distributed and "hear editor" letters from proponents of each side have appeared in the local paper.

Opponents argue that the old log dam, built for $2700, lasted 27 years and the proposed bond issue would be a needless expense as the new dam would be built for approximately $8,000. That the city, besides building a log dam, should also drill an additional deep well for auxiliary supply; that eventually water may be had from the Astoria may not hold and finally that the water rates would rise if the bond issue is approved.

City officials say that the old log dam washed out with the flood in 1942, and that a year ago when bids were asked for both a concrete and a log dam with settling basins, the lowest bid for the log dam was around $35,000 and for the concrete dam, $41,000, and that the city has investigated the possibility of obtaining water from the Detroit dam and found that if it could be had at all it would be some years from now and in any event the city would have to build a long pipeline to its nearest source.

Further arguments advanced by the city in a circular which went into the mails Saturday morning were that wells have proved unsatisfactory and the city has been advised by geologists and irrigation engineers against dug wells. The city has spent approximately $9,000 on two useless wells now both closed, and the selection of the new dam site rather than the old one was chosen to eliminate stream pollution.

In its concluding statement the city adds, "Our finances are perfectly adequate to take care of this project and leave ample funds available for continued work on the distribution system. No taxes are involved."

Needlecraft Society Meets at Independence

INDEPENDENCE — Mrs. Ralph Kietzing, Mrs. A. L. Harding and Mrs. H. N. Mattison were hostesses Thursday for the regular meeting of the Needlecraft society. Thirty-two members were present.

The business meeting, conducted by the president, Mrs. T. D. Pomeroy, was followed by devotions led by Mrs. Minnie Hiltbrand.

The afternoon was spent sewing for the annual bazaar to be held this fall.

Refreshments were served by the hostesses with Mrs. Blanche Kirkendall and Mrs. Coral Collins presiding at the tea table.

Solicitation by Legion Is Plan

John Kerrick, general chairman of the American Legion state convention slated for Salem August 4 to 6, warned local merchants against unauthorized solicitations for the convention.

Every authorized solicitor, said Kerrick, will carry a letter of identification signed by Onas Olson, executive secretary of the convention. At present solicitation for the official souvenir program is under way and a decorating program will be authorized soon.

Headquarters for the 31st annual convention are in the Senator hotel lobby from 1 to 5 p.m. daily.

AMINOPHYLLINE

DRS. ARTHUR GLADSTONE and LOUIS GOODMAN of the University of Vermont College of Medicine, report that they have used Aminophylline to quickly relieve the pain of attacks of gall-bladder colic. While not a cure for gall-bladder trouble, Aminophylline has proved effective in relieving the severe pain after morphine has failed.
