Lad, 10, Calls Cow 'Six-Sided' Chicago Boy's Natural History Paper a 'Gem of Originality'

By Edward S. Kitch
CHICAGO, June 11 (AP)—A ten-year-old unidentified lad's natural history observation appears in the May issue of the Chicago Natural History Bulletin.

Quoted by Sir Ernest Gowers in his book, "Plain Words," it is termed a gem for originality. The book on writing was prepared for the guidance of British civil servants.

The student of natural history titled his essay "A Bird and a Beast." Here is what he wrote: "The bird that I am going to write about is the owl. The owl cannot see at all by day and at night is as blind as a bat. Owl Blind as Bat

"I do not know much about the owl, so I will go to the beast which I am going to choose. It is the cow. The cow is a mammal. It has six sides—right, left, and upper and below. At the back it has a tail on which hangs a brush. With this it sends the flies away so that they do not fall into the milk.

Head Grows Horns
"The head is for the purpose of growing horns and so that the mouth can be somewhere. The horns are to butt with and the mouth is to moo with. Under the cow hangs the milk. It is arranged for milking. When people milk, the milk comes and there is never an end to the supply. How the cow does it I have not realized, but it makes more and more. The cow has a fine sense of smell; one can smell it far away. This is the reason for the fresh air in the country.

Man Cow an Ox
"The man cow is called an ox. It is not a mammal. The cow does not eat much, but what it eats it eats twice, so that it gets enough. When it is hungry it moos, and when it says nothing it is because its inside is full up with grass."

Sir Ernest gives the boy an "A" for style.
