Satern Starts Recreation Job At Silverton

SILVERTON, June 19—Darold Satern, 22-year-old former Silverton high school athlete, will start work as recreational director at Silverton Monday. Satern, a navy veteran, has been attending school at Pacific Lutheran college at Parkland, Wash., where he is majoring in education with minors in physical education and speech.

Plans are underway to develop an extensive recreational program for the Silverton community. Swimming classes will be held in the morning at the pool with Satern as instructor. The time schedule for these classes will be posted on the bulletin board early next week.

Softball leagues will be organized to include all ages, with the smaller boys playing in the afternoon and the older boys' and men's teams in the evening. Church teams of Silverton are being invited to take part in the league games.

The new tennis courts will be used not only for tennis but volleyball and badminton. Archery equipment is being purchased by the recreation board and lessons will be provided in this for those interested. A horseshoe tournament will also be organized at the courts in the city park.

A variety of activities for the youngsters each day at the play area at the park and at the swimming pool are now being provided in the Washington Irving building and in the Eugene Field play shed.

Wade Scott is chairman of the Silverton Recreational association, which is sponsoring the summer's program.

Seven Zionists Convicted by Hungary Court

BUDAPEST, Hungary, June 19 (AP)—Seven Zionist leaders were convicted Saturday on charges of helping Zionists leave the country and were sentenced to terms ranging from six months to three years.

Two other Zionists were acquitted by the court of justice. The case of a tenth defendant, an orthodox Jew, was separated because he did not want to appear in the dock on Saturday, the Jewish sabbath, his lawyer said.

In their statements to the court, the defendants protested strongly the prosecutor's charge they were "tools in the hands of the imperialists."

The convictions were obtained under a 1948 law which forbids any attempts to cross the border illegally. The prosecutor claimed it was passed "to protect people, misled by Anglo-Saxon propaganda, from becoming cannon-fodder serving imperialist interests."

The first locomotive built in America for actual common-carrier service was "The Best Friend of Charlestown," which made its first trip in 1831. On the first run, the engine fell into a ditch but held the rails on later at Bunker Hill monument.

Studies Claim U.S. Develops Social Classes

By Loyd Brady

CHICAGO, June 19 (AP)—Have you ever said, "He's from the wrong side of the tracks?"

Or, "She's one of the 400?" If you have, a group of university sociologists say, you've recognized that our democratic society has developed social class.

This group, headed by W. Lloyd Warner, professor of anthropology and sociology at the University of Chicago, has published studies locating and defining American class structures. The studies were made in a New England community and a city near Chicago. Similar material was available in another study of class in the deep south.

More than 20 years of research was done. The New England city, of 15,000 population, was the fictitious name "Yankee City." The midwestern community, of about 10,000, was dubbed "Jonesville."

This is the picture presented: Six Classes Listed

"We have a six-class system—which we don't like to admit—and it is growing more rigid as our society gets older. Hence the great American sport of social climbing is showing signs of being slowed considerably" by this structure.

There are other consequences outlined. The authors feel class is "at least one major reason" for the growth of labor unions, that it lies behind "many apparently senseless strikes," and that much of our "social unrest" can be traced to it.

The study found that the system, "necessary to get the work of society done," grew into its present form as a result of the disappearance of free western lands, and the change from a handicraft production system to factory-machine methods.

Each Has Characteristics

The net result was the formation of the six more or less exclusive social classes. These are the commonly recognized upper, middle, and lower classes divided into their respective upper and lower segments.

Each segment, the study found, has its own special characteristics. The upper-upper group consists largely of first families. "They live in neighborhoods of large houses surrounded by well-kept grounds. Their furnishings are antiques handed down from generation to generation, and they tend to think that birth and breeding" are the prime hall marks of social standing.

The lower-upper may live in the same kind of neighborhood

—but its homes have been purchased recently and furnished with "boughten" antiques. Members of this group have large cars, heavy with chromium, and tend to discount the value of birth and breeding. They are very rigid in imitating behavior of the upper-upper.

Teachers From Middle Class

The two middle classes—and largely the upper strata—supply most of the office holders of politics, particularly on school boards, as well as three-fourths of the teachers. They live in smaller houses in neat neighborhoods, are active in community work and participate fully in church affairs.

The upper-lower and lower-middle generally are factory hands, clerks and operators of small businesses. Their houses are small. The upper groups "usually speak of them as good, substantial people" who are eager to get ahead.

At the bottom of the social scale are the casual workers and transients. Their homes are apt to be tarpaper shacks. They are "generally thought of as immoral."

The studies found that education, in the 20th century, has become the principal bridge between classes. By it, children born into one of the lower echelons find means to climb. It offers a
