AFL Backs Social Security Plan Sponsored by Salem Delegates

A resolution to liberalize social security presented by Salem delegates to the Oregon State Federation of Labor convention in Eugene was adopted despite an unfavorable recommendation by the committee which studied the measure, convention delegates said upon returning here Saturday.

F. J. A. Boehringer of Salem, executive board district representative, said the resolution requesting 5 per cent contributions by both employer and employee was debated thoroughly but was finally adopted at the convention which ended Saturday.

A program of political education also was adopted by the convention, with Boehringer vice-chairman in district 3. There are four congressional districts of the state.

Also Local Politics — Boehringer said, "We want to inform the people about our political programs and views, not only on a national scale but also on a state-wide basis and locally." The program is headed by Phil Brady of Portland and is modeled after suggestions of Joseph D. Keenan, national director of the union's league for political education.

In other action, the convention passed a resolution approving proposed establishment of a Columbia valley authority and went on record as opposing general sales taxes but not certain specific ones, such as the gasoline tax, Boehringer said.

Condemned Denham — Herbert Barker, executive secretary of the central labor council in Salem, said Saturday the convention strongly "disapproved and condemned" Robert N. Denham, legal advisor of national labor relations board.

The delegates drew up a request asking President Harry S. Truman to replace Denham. Another important resolution, Barker said, asks the International Association of Machinists to come back into the AFL. The machinists withdrew from the AFL several years ago.

The convention, attended by more than 400 delegates, voted to meet in LaGrande next year.

Weather Slows Road Oiling Plans

Oiling of Marion county roads damaged by snow and freezing weather last winter has been slowed, by cool weather the past week, Commissioner Roy Rice reported Saturday morning. The oil sets too quickly in such weather for durability.

Market road 22 has been finished, however, and work is progressing on 51, Rice said.

Portland Wrecks Top Rest of Oregon Cities Combined

Incorporated cities and towns outside of Portland accounted for 20,165 traffic accidents and 47 deaths in 1944, compared to Portland's 26,713 accidents and 55 fatalities, Secretary of State Earl T. Newbry announced here Friday.

Persons on foot comprised 58 per cent of the Portland deaths, but only 38 per cent in other cities. More than 97 per cent of the smaller cities' accidents involved violations of law, with lack of right of way the most frequent offense. Although 16 per cent of the mishaps involved trucks only one-third of the commercial drivers were in the violation category compared with more than half for all drivers. Expressive speed figures in fewer than 2 per cent of all accidents but in nine per cent of the fatalities.
