Steamboatmen Hold Reunion At Champog

By Lester F. Cour

CHAMPOEG, June 26 (Special)
More than 1,500 persons from Oregon and Washington were on hand at Champog state park for the 24th annual reunion of the Veteran Steamboatmen's Association of the West Sunday.

Distinguished guests and veteran Willamette and Columbia river pilots took the traditional ride from Portland to Champog on the steamship Claire, last of the northwest's stern-wheel boats allowed to carry passengers.

After the Claire tied up at Champog's banks, the crowds ate picnic lunches in the park under semi-threatening skies.

Capt. E. R. Mooney, veteran Columbia river pilot and master of the association, was master of ceremonies for the 1949 reunion. Capt. Clyde Ray, an old-time pilot and now a member of the Portland port commission, told the colorful history of steamboating on the Willamette and Columbia rivers.

Pilot of the Claire was Capt. Fritz Kruse, Portland, the last river pilot with a license to steer passenger ships past Oregon City on the Willamette. His father was one of the first river boatmen to navigate the Willamette between Oregon City and Dayton.

Veteran river pilots introduced during the program were Capt. John Ackles, Charles Anderson, Charles Bernstrom, A. Bartholdi, John Brown, Tom Beresen, William Barry, J. O. Cejka, James W. Copeland, Frederick Gunderson, Albert Johnson, August A. Lofstedt, Robert E. Moon, former association master, Charles Nelson, Ralph E. (Cappy Ricks) Peasley, Harry Wagner and J. F. Wright.

Boy Governor Unimpressed By New York

(Editor's note: Following is another in a series of stories written exclusively for the Oregon Statesman by Jim Cooke, the Statesman's 1948-49 school correspondent who was "governor" of Oregon in the Hi-Y's youth program and now is on a trip to eastern U. S. to represent his state.)

NEW YORK CITY, June 24 (Special) — "The greatest city on earth," they say. Well, we have seen it from the Empire State building, we've seen it from a boat on a 35-mile tour around Manhattan island, we've seen it from taxis, and we've seen it from a very humble spot on the street; but it hasn't impressed us yet.

Just a bunch of tall, drab buildings with mobs of people scurrying about them sums up our attitude of the place. As Lynn Davis, Boy Governor of Idaho aptly stated "People don't rush here any faster than they do in my home town, Pocatello; it is just that there are more people rushing at the same time!"

New York is distinctive in more ways than one. We found that out as we were going to the waterfront to tour Queen Mary. As soon as the cab reached the slum district along the waterfront a strange odor drifted in through the window. We were still squirming from the first assault of the smell when Lynn remarked with his usual calmness: "It smells like a bunch of polecats to me." I read in a book that a person has to adjust himself to all sorts of situations in life. New Yorkers are no exceptions.

"Smoke Rings' Sign
Times Square is one place here where I found myself asking directions to it from the very center of it. There are three neon signs in Times Square which make it different from any other street. One sign shows a man blowing steam "smoke rings", another has a wide waterfall and a third shows why young women look better in a certain brand of corsets.

Sees U. N. Session
The United Nations headquarters are located out on Long Island in two very modernistic buildings. While there we saw the Trusteeship Council in session deciding some very trivial business concerning a man in Tanganyika who had petitioned for his rights. No one on the council could quite figure out what he wanted but the United Kingdom's delegate and the Russian representative were waging a full-fledged attack at each other on general principles.

I learned that diplomacy does not mean tact, at least their kind, because they expressed attitudes about each other's knowledge of the situation quite freely. In wrestling parlance it would be called "no holds barred."

Doerfler Clan Holds Reunion

Twentieth annual reunion of the Doerfler clan was held Sunday at Dallas city park with about 50 in attendance.

Doerflers and others related to the family by blood or marriage participated in a picnic lunch, a brief business session and a ball game.

Douglas Hanneman of Portland was elected president succeeding Ed Doerfler of Shaw. Other elected included Eugene Hanneman of Salem, vice president; William Oleson of Corvallis, secretary-treasurer; Ann Marie Rose of Salem, historian, and Wallace Doerfler of Salem, program committee chairman.

Don Doerfler of Salem presided at the business session.
