

His hobby of repairing old, discarded clocks keeps him ticking, declares Henry Klender, who will be 83 this September. Klender lives with his daughter, Mrs. Cecil Rice, 930 Grant st., and in the four years since his wife died has repaired hundreds of old clocks. He uses the tools used by his father more than 60 years ago. He was a janitor at the statehouse for 22 years after coming to Oregon from Chicago in 1903 because of ill health. At present he has 45 clocks running. (Statesman photo)

Pleasant Grove Church Holds Homecoming

AUMSVILLE — The Pleasant Grove Presbyterian church held a homecoming and basket lunch Sunday with the Rev. Harold Roberts, Medford, as featured speaker for the occasion.

The church building, south of Aumsville and West of West Station, was the second church built in the northwest, in 1856, and is the oldest church standing.

The church and cemetery, located on four acres donated by C. C. Condit, was constructed of rough lumber hauled by ox team from Oregon City and planed by hand on the site by the Neal brothers. Old-time square nails were used and the original hand-hewn pews are still in use along with the bible purchased in 1856.

The building has been painted and new windows installed recently, linking the old with the new at the landmark. Following the death of the Rev. J. Steward of Albany 10 years ago, services were not held until last fall.
