

Program Set To Cut Inroad Of Budworm

The state board of forestry Tuesday authorized a cooperative research program designed to wipe out spruce budworm infestation in Oregon's forests.

George Spaur, deputy state forester, said the research plans will be placed in effect July 15 in an attempt to control the needle-eating insects before tree damage is done.

Under the present system spraying to eliminate the insects can only be carried out over a 10 to 15-day larval period annually. Much of the tree damage has occurred by this time.

"If the spraying time can be extended from spring to mid-summer," Spaur explained, "it will materially increase the forest land acreage that can be sprayed and treated annually."

Local foresters estimate more trees could be damaged annually in Lane county by the budworm than from all forest fires in the past ten years.

Three toxic sprays solutions will be tested for this proposed control measure. Nine test areas of 330 acres each will be treated with solutions of DDT, toxaphene and benzene hexachloride applied from helicopter. Effectiveness of the sprays will be determined next spring.

Supervisory work will be handled by John B. Woods, Jr., assistant state forester, and Richard Berry, research director. The project is a cooperative undertaking of the state board of forestry, the bureau of entomology and plant quarantine and U. S. forest service.

Studio Won't Let Actress Go High-hat

HOLLYWOOD, July 5—(AP)—If you like to see actresses in bathing suits, or other leggy, chesty poses, give Universal-International studio today's gold star.

The studio has found that young actresses—only too willing to go for "cheesecake" art, as it's called, when they're seeking fame—often decide it's beneath their dignity when they hit the higher-salaried brackets. So, it announced today it's writing the "cheesecake clause" into its new contracts.

In brief, the section reads that any gal with physical charms suitable for display "shall for the first five years of her contract display said charms in publicity pictures as well as on the screen."

That's No Chev, Governor!

Yes, politics does make strange bedfellows, as illustrated above where Gov. Douglas McKay, in private life the Salem Chevrolet dealer, poses with a 1949 Ford. It all came about recently at Colorado Springs, Colo., where Ford Motor Co. provided new Fords as temporary official cars for dignitaries at a governors' conference. Fellow at the right is a Colorado state patrolman.

6 Cars Figure In Smash-up; Injuries Minor

A smash-up involving six cars Tuesday morning at South High and Ferry streets left all cars damaged but brought no serious injuries to drivers, according to investigating police.

The mishap began when cars driven by Andrew J. Greech, 1020 Auburn rd., and Donald M. Mackling, 925 Madison st., collided. Police said, Mackling's auto, a 1948 Studebaker, then careened across the intersection and smashed into four autos parked on the Ron's Motor company used car lot on South High street, according to the officer's report.

Both moving cars were badly damaged, police said, and the four stationary vehicles also were damaged.

Two Found Guilty On Charge of Sale Of Underage Veal

PORTLAND, July 5—(AP)—Four defendants indicted for sale of under-age veal were found guilty today by District Judge Frank E. Day.

Morris Goldfoot and Warren Oster, Portland market owners, were given suspended sentences of 180 days in jail and fined $500 each. N. W. Andrews, Tigard Meat Co., was given a similar suspended sentence, but his $400 fine was also suspended. Carl Rudeep, Portland, was fined $500 but this was suspended.

Judge Day's ruling upheld the validity of the law regulating sale of calf meat, but he said the four-week-old requirement on veal is an arbitrary age set by the legislature. He said he had learned that veal may become mature in 5 to 21 days.
