Woman Detective Knows Work Miss Lang Engaged

By Adelaide Kerr
AP Newfeature Writer

NEW YORK—When the New York police narcotic bureau heard reports that teen-age youngsters in the Bronx were taking marijuana some time ago, it sent Detective Winifred Hayes on the case. She put on the slacks and shirt that are her working clothes, climbed into her bright convertible and wheeled uptown.

There she watched and waited, hidden in her parked car or mingling with children and people of the neighborhood till she had learned what she needed to know to clamp down on men who were selling drugs to youngsters.

You would never dream to look at Miss Hayes that she is a detective. She looks more like a woman who would scream at sight of a burglar. Her dark blond hair curls softly around her young face, her eyes are deep blue, her smile is warm and quick. Dressed in her street clothes, she is a sight to turn any man's head.

She had two years at Hunter college and worked at the New York radio station of the Paulist fathers, before her father, who was on the police force, suggested she would make a good detective. She joined the police force in 1940 after a brisk training in city laws, and lifting 40 pound weights. In time she became one of about 20 New York women detectives, and finally was placed on the narcotic squad—a unique assignment for a woman.

She and Detective Sherman Willis work together as a team in a constant search for the sellers of heroin, cocaine and other drugs and for their "plants" (caches). One seller fastened his dope to the backs of mirrors and picture frames with adhesive tape. Others hid it in their shoes or under bricks in the cellar.

Sometimes Willis does the front work, sometimes it's Miss Hayes, depending on the case. Hayes is particularly useful at trailing people on subways or at searching women sellers who carry the dope in their girdle or stocking top. More than once she has done stellar work—and some of her biggest hauls have followed hunches.

There was the time the narcotic squad was tipped that 56 ounces of cocaine could be found in a certain Cuban's apartment in New York. A careful search failed to reveal it but the Cuban left town in haste. Some days later when Hayes and Willis were trailing an addict, they picked up the trail of a seller and followed him to the awning-covered door of a bar and grill where he mysteriously disappeared. Search in the grill failed to reveal him. Suddenly the seller reappeared with a companion carrying a package. Willis nabbed both and found ten ounces of cocaine in the package.

Search of the man's apartment, however, revealed nothing more interesting than a bunch of keys. Questioned about one of the keys, the seller said that it belonged to an apartment in Cuba. Suddenly all the pieces of the puzzle flashed together in Hayes' mind to make one complete picture. She realized that the Cuban's apartment which she had searched fruitlessly was near the awning covered door of the grill where the dope seller had disappeared. He must have gone to that apartment! She took the key there, tried it on a hidden door and opened it to find 46 ounces of cocaine. With the 10 ounces they had found on the seller, they had the 56 ounces they had been tipped about.

Miss Hayes' job keeps her working long hours, sometimes more than 24 at a time. So she cannot make dates far ahead. But she sees movies anyway. She owns a movie projector, rents films and runs them at home. Dressmaking is her real hobby, though. After a hard day in the dope racket she turns to the sewing machine and runs up one of the dresses that help make her such a pleasant view. And if things get dull at home, she has one sure cure—she reads a detective yarn.

Joseph Meyer Takes Bride

MT. ANGEL—St. Mary's Catholic church with the altars and sanctuaries decorated with white flowers made a beautiful setting for the wedding of Miss Ora Mae Koch of Monitor and Joseph Meyer of Salem at 9:30 o'clock Saturday morning, July 9. The Rev. Vincent Koppert officiated at the double ring ceremony and the nuptial mass. Miss Helen Keber presided at the organ and St. Mary's choir sang with solos by Miss Pauline Saffield and Miss Eustelle Barman.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tony Koch of Monitor and the groom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. John J. Meyer of Salem. Mr. Meyer gave his daughter in marriage. Her gown was of white satin with fitted bodice with sheer yoke and four-tiered ruffles of French lace and full skirt with court train. Matching tiers of lace edged the tulle veil held in place by a coronet of pearl beads. She carried a colonial bouquet of orchids and white carnations and wore a three-strand pearl necklace, a family heirloom worn by all brides in the Meyer family.

Miss Caroline Zuber of Woodburn was maid of honor in lime green marquisette studded with gold and bridesmaids were Miss Arlene Zuber and Miss Clara Baume, who wore frocks of yellow marquisette studded with gold. All three attendants wearing matching hats and mitts and carrying colonial bouquets of variegated sweet peas.

The best man was John Meyer and groomsmen, William Hassenbacher and Alfred Hunt of Salem. David Locock, Lawrence Weisner and Nick Weiss were ushers. A buffet breakfast and reception followed the church service in St. Mary's dining hall. Mrs. James Lang, sister of the groom, sat at the cake. Mrs. Toddy Jell passed the guest book, Mrs. Joseph Henkes, Milwaukee, presided at the coffee urn and Mrs. Lester Schroeder, Salem, at the punch bowl. Mrs. August Hunt, Woodburn, assisted with the serving.

Mr. and Mrs. Koch left the same day on a honeymoon which will take them to Crater Lake. They will make their home in Salem.
