The Oregon Statesman

"No Favor Sways Us, No Fear Shall Awe" From First Statesman, March 28, 1851

THE STATESMAN PUBLISHING COMPANY CHARLES A SPRAGUE, Editor and Publisher

Entered at the postoffice at Salem, Oregon, as second chang matter under act of congress March 3, 1879. Published every morning. Business office 215 S. Commercial, Salem, Oregon. Telephone 2-2441.

Taft Made Palatable

Swallowing the Taft - Hartley act straight burned union leaders all the way down to their toes. They demanded a chaser, one which completely eliminated that awful taste in their mouths. What they are getting if anything is another dose of Taft, watered down.

The national-emergency injunction - which President Truman had used to put John L. Lewis in his place-is what the unions gagged on most. Controversy in the congress raged over this clause; this battle and the fact that Green and Murray lost was played up by the press and by the unions themselves. The unions did not seem particularly anxious to call attention to the fact that legislators gave careful consideration to amendments which will meet many of labor's objections to the original act. Based on experience with the 1947 law; these changes ought to improve its administration and make the regulations more palatable to organized workers.

Tait's rewrite includes the following revisions (listed in Business Week):

Foreman excepted from NLRB recognition must actually be the management's straw boss. Unions are responsible only for the acts of their authorized agents, not for individual members of splinter groups. NLRB's independent counsel is' eliminated, its legal angles will come under the same rules as other semi-judicial government agencies. Closed shops are banned but preferential hiring malls are permitted. Union shop elections are eliminated. One kind of secondary boycott is authorized: unions may refuse to deal with "struck work."

NLRB no longer is required to seek temperary injunctions in unfair labor practices cases; it may do so if it wishes, however. It is now up to the employer if he wants welfare funds under joint control. Checkoff of dues is allowed if the members don't reject it. Unions can make political expenditures and participate in campaigns as long as they do not contribute to a candidate's campaign fund. The right to vote in union-recognition elections is restored to workers on strike.

▶ Unions feel that the president's injunction power is a sword hanging over their heads, but the fact is that it rarely falls on them. They ought to be more concerned with the rules governing everyday union conduct, for these affect the individual worker and it is these which Taft has softened much to their liking. The "slave labor" epithet is ridiculous in the light of experience and the unions, if the political angles to the argument were ignored, could exist quite comfortably under a few government regulations. Management has.

chairman of the commission of the Federal Council of Churches to study ways for a just and durable peace.

Dulles was appointed by Governor Dewey not just as a reward for his fidelity to the recent republican candidate but because Dewey thought that Dulles could make a contribution, in the interval before the November election of a senator to succeed Robert Wagner of New York, to the senate as it considers various phases of our foreign relations. He will still make a contribution, but it will not be as effective as if he were a member of the foreign affairs committee. Instead he is to get assignments to the postoffice committee, on the committee on District of Columbia and perhaps the rules committee. But Dulles isn't reaching for his hat. He says he regreats the furore raised and is willing to serve on any committee.

Morse keeps his place in the waiting list.

Gratke's Last Word

The 13 American newsmen who were killed in a plane crash while guests of the Dutch government-what would they have told us about the Indosesian situation if they had returned?

Charles Gratke, once a University of Oregon student and late foreign editor of the Christian Science Monitor, filed his analysis of the surging nationalism of colonial peoples just before the plane took off. Here is what he said.

The Dutch have done well in their island possessions. Their techniques, vision and enterprise worked to make the Indies a lucrative garden long before Truman's Point Four ever was framed. But it was with Indonesian soil and native labor, and now the Indonesians after 350 years as Dutch subjects say, "You governed us well, but you governed us."

The awakening of national consciousness and a new sense of human dignity make the natives very impatient to get on without the Dutch. The dangers of advancing communism in Asia dictated speed in erecting the bulwarks of nationalism, too. But the Dutch want to make slow and orderly progress toward autonomy, and the natives want sovereignty first, negotiating of economic and military questions later. The conflict is not whether they will get independence - that is pledged to happen this year; it is over the details. The Dutch are worried that the new United States of Indonesia will not be able to implement their agreements; the natives say, "Give us a chance."

Negotiations are difficult because both sides have bitter memories of the recent all-out war and current terrorism. Yet agreements must be reached-not only to protect Dutch interests but also the security of other nations' investments in Indonesia, American oil companies, for instance, have spent $90,000,000 rebuilding their holdings in Sumatra since the war, and they don't want that investment nationalized. Gratke suggests that perhaps there can be but one method to use: It is to forget much of the past and move forward somewhere between the two extremes along a middle ground.

Easy to Pack, Avers Henry (Poor Duds)

By Henry McLemore

Come tomorrow I will be off for Europe, Africa, and way points. Thanks to feverish activity on my part during the last ten days, of my affairs are in complete disorder. By getting up late and going to bed the same there are no ends that are not loose, no details which do not have to be finished at the last second

One of the McLemore things that I yet have to do is pack. Gracefully thrown around my hotel room is my wardrobe, and if you ever saw a man lighting out for foreign parts with a worse wardrobe than I have, you can get a big bet out of me. My best suit is a 1928 seersucker with a rip. My second best is a 1932 tropical worsted with two rips. I do not have the heart to describe to you my fourth best suit, but the fact that it has only one sleeve might possibly furnish you with an idea as to its quality.

People who can pack suitcases are born, not made. I wish to goodness that a newspaper man whose name I will not divulge were here at this moment. This newspaper man, whom we will call O. B. Keeler because that is very near to his name, once did the greatest job of packing for me that has ever been done for one newspaper man by another.

This epic packing job was done in Augusta, Georgia, in 1938, in the Bon Air Vanderbilt hotel. On the eighth floor, if you are that nosey. The Masters' golf tournament had just finished. I had 35 minutes to get to downtown Augusta to catch a bus for Jacksonville, Florida. Nothing I possessed was packed.

At this crucial moment the man we are calling Mr. Keeler entered the room and I explained to him that I could not stop for small chit-chat because I had to pack-and pack in a hurry.

Mr. Keeler asked why I didn't go down and check out and let him pack for me. "O. B.," I said, will you do that for me? I'm in whale of a hurry, and I sure would appreciate it if you would be kind enough to pack for me." "When you get back," O. B. said, "you won't have anything to worry about." . . went downstairs, checked out, came back, and not a suitcase or a rag of clothes was visible. "How in the world did you pack for me as fast as that?" I asked.

Valve Calls New Route A Pipe Dream Plan

article on the front page of your newspaper concerning federal aid for the Pudding River-Silverton highway project; $290,000 for grading, surfacing and asphalt concrete on a new proposed route" but you neg- since 1937 for the U.S. and grey Doctor's Hearing lected to say that there are oats "very spotted". already two highways running Production of barley was esti- To Be Set Friday parallel to this proposed new mated at about 244 million buroute; $60,000 for a new bridge shels, 23 per cent lower than a Again you should have added that there are already two showed a strengthening tendency bridges almost parallel and less this week, coming up $1 in price. than a mile apart; $75,000 for Tuesday No. 2 bright western baran overpass over the Southern ey was quoted at a strong $51 a public that there is only one slow train a day over this rail-day night and Tuesday which halted combining of all grains and seeds. route that wohld include all of their dream plans. Also one which would run through a large theaply bought tract of land No greater means of wasting

Theft of Tools Charged to Trio Of Young Men

Three youths were arrested by Marion county sheriff's deputies and state police in Woodburn Tuesday afternoon on charges of larceny.

The youths were Percy Eugene McCarthy, 18, of Salem, Willard Lyle Pollard, 20, of Woodburn and a 16-year-old juvenile of Salem. trio admitted taking about $250 trio admitted taking about $250 worth of tools May 25 from George B. Hanley, owner of the Engineer Sand and Gravel plant, $alem route 2. The loot included three tool boxes, two hydraulic jacks, a log chain, gasoline and a storage battery.

The arrest followed an investigation by state police of a tool theft from a Woodburn garage. It was discovered some of the tools were sold to the garage recently and were among those reported missing in May by Hanley.

of the Officers traced the sale tools and the search led them to the trio arrested Tuesday, About $100 worth of tools were redovered Tuesday.

District Attorney E. O. Stadter, jr., in commenting on the arrests blasted parents who fail to take responsibility for their children's conduct.

"Almost without exception lapcenies charged to juveniles are committed by youths roaming the streets during the early morning hours, often in cars furnished by their parents," Stacter said,

The youths were held in lieu of $1,000 bail each and will appear in district court this morning to face charges.

Also in the sheriff's office Tuesday afternoon, Robert Anderson Hockenbery, who gave his address as New Orleans, La., was jailed on a charge of auto theft.

Hockenbery was arrested by the Aurora chief of police when he was seen driving through Aurora shortly after the chief heard a state police broadcasting describing a stolen car and its driver. Hockenbery's automobile ariswered the description of the car which was reported stolen! from Longview, Wash., the chief said. He is being held for the Longview sheriff's office.

cast indicating the smallest crop

The state civil service commisyea rago. Feed barley prices sion will meet here Friday to decide on a date for a hearing for Dr. Horace G. Miller, dismissed Oregon State hospital psychiatrist. Pacific railroad and again you ton. Only a few fields had begun for insubordination, asked the should have told your reading harvesting prior to the rain Mon-commission to review his case.

NOW ... which would run through a large cheaply bought tract of land so someone could unload at a big profit. Here is another thing which ou failed to mention which in the ear

Picture yourself with a new Phantomold on your wearing a hearing aid!

See this newest hearing improvement. Drop in at the office today.

Beltone Hearing Aid. You're poised

5 # # 11 69 (Continued from page 1) present building for the types now not accepted. The conservative estimate of the sum that needs to be provided locally is $1,100,000. On new construction the federal government will match one dollar for two. A million dollars is a lot of money; but not in terms of Salem's population, wealth and prospects. About the time of the first world war and after Salem raised hundreds of thousands of dollars for paper plants, linen mills and other business enter-The city was much

To the Editor: A few days ago I read an

Morse "Veto" on Dulles

The emphatic and perhaps testy "no" given by Sen. Wayne L. Morse to the suggestion that newly appointed Sen. John Foster Dulles be given a place on the senate foreign affairs committee points up the archaic system that still dominates in cong ressional organization. It is true that Morse has been "in line" for a spot on this committee, and it was quite natural for him to guard his place. He didn't want to be a displaced person. In fact the wound still rankles that he was pushed aside when the 80th congress was organized.

But the fact still sticks out that Mr. Dulles is qualified in a most unusual way for a seat on wis committee. Grandson of a secretary of state, he has devoted his mature life to international affairs, most of the time in the practice of law where international relations were involved and part of the time in public service with the state department. He has served as a U.S. delegate at the San Francisco conference, at sessions of United Nations and at postwar conferences to write peace treaties. A sincere Christian, we was

"UNITED We Stand"

Today officials of West Coast Airlines are coming to town seeking to convince Salem that the latter should accept a switch from the United Airlines schedule to West Coast.

Now we like to be hospitable here. And if West Coast wants to come in and make regular calls we'll be happy to have them. But for a switch from United to West Coast, no thanks. Our major interest is in through connections with California points, with Seattle and Vancouver and with connections via Portland to the east. United is giving us and is the only line in the area able to give us this service. Sorry, but "UNITED We Stand."

many

Some of Quaker Report 'Discounted'

By J. M. Roberts, Jr. AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

The American Friends Service committee, in suggesting changes in American foreign policy which it believs will lead toward peace with the Soviet Uunion, says: "We are well aware of the desirability of certain changes in the policy and attitude of the Soviet Union. Our suggestions deal with the policy and attitude of the United States. This is because: 1) United States policy is

Literary

By W. G. Regers

THE STUMBLING STONE, by

$3)

not

Aubrey Mennen (Scribner's;

Far off in India, among the British who left when the Indians took over, there was, according to the very merry scheme of this novel, Colley Burton, who had been doing good works among the heathen for a quarter of a century. Back home in London, there was a deal of organized do-gooding, instigated and run by Gresham and backed by the government through Lord

Trayne. The most conspicuous object of this welfare project was young Charles Hopkins, who had been naughty and now was redeemed or who at least had been in jan and for the moment was

These apparently well intentioned people are brought together by Lucky Prynne. A most successful writer in the days when the public wanted smart, salty fiction, he had been stranded in the gutter by the rise of popular taste to higher things.

To restore himself in favor, and money in his pocket, he did an immensely successful uplift drama based on the story of Burton

as told in an unpublished manuscript. He wrote supposing Burton to be dead. Burton's appear-are out of the blue theatens to the responsibility of the United the triumph of good is only natural, and easily shared for the States and is the proper subject long view. But for the immediacy of attention by a group of United of the situation it has an air of States citizens; 2) We believe attempting to create policy in a that our suggestions, if carried vacuum which excludes some of the major facts of life. out, would increase the likeli-For instance, the committee hood of the Soviet Union's making the desired changes on its proposes political and economic side Coming from an agency of the Quakers which once won the Nobel Peace prize, this faith in every pound he ever earned.

Guidepost

put him in the red, for Burton has grounds for suing him for

To divert Burton from such whom there is no harm, he Christians, in whom there is.

some questions about the nature of good, and the motives of benefactors and beneficiaries, about how to extend the helping hand high enough so everyone can see it, about how to love your neighbor and feather your nest.

mercenary thoughts, Lucky and Van Billiter, his stage Burton, counted at Paris. That conferpropose that the returned saint ence was held because the Rusresume his good works in associsians wanted a face-saving proation with Gresham in behalf of cedure for backing down on the Hopkins and misguided youth in Berlin_blockade without achievgeneral. But Burton, a simple ing its objective, which had been though not gullible soul, begins to drive the Allies out of Berlin. to wonder about his potential The lifting of the blockade collaborators. When they help the poor they help themselves;

did, of course, serve as additional confirmation for the belief what they sow they expect to that Russia does not seek war. reap; virtue is never content to The blockade could have been be its own reward. Burton susturned into a military issue had pects that, instead of expending that been their desire. his efforts among the heathen,

The entire American delegashould have labored among the tion came away from Paris convinced more firmly than ever There are delightful characthat the "tough" policy toward ters, like Emily Slayer who cuts Russia was correct; that direct her sentences bewilderingly in containment, not agreements two: and Mennen knows exactly which depend on good faith for when we have had enough of their operation, was the main them. But through the scintillathope of getting along without ing conversation and the enter-taining paradoxez come trouble-

Believers in the premise that peace is possible between two parties which do not want war will find this containment policy very hard to shake, pending some concrete acts indicating a changed attitude on the part of Russia herself.

I soon found out.

Mr Keeler had taken my suitcase and all my wardrobe and gently dropped them down the elevator shaft. I had no worry about luggage. I had no worry about clothes. As far as I know, my wardrobe of 1938 is still at the bottom of the elevator shaft in the Bon Air Vanderbilt Hotel in Augusta, Georgia. "Clothes do not make the man," Mr. Keeler told me. "Fure thermore, there'll be more room on the bus now that you have no luggage. Your fellow bus riders will be more comfortable. You will be more comfortable yourself. For the service I have just rendered you I will not ask one penny in payment, for, you see, Henry, you're an old and dear, friend of mine and friendshop knows no bounds." . . .

I repeat that I wish Mr. Keeler were here today to pack for me on the eve of my overseas adventure. I would not have to worry about the 66-pound baggage limit which Pan-American enforces. I could step into the Clipper absolutely empty-handed. I could walk into customs in Lisbon and laugh at them when they ask me to open my bags. Unfortunately, Mr. Keeler is not here. He's in Atlanta, Georgia. So, I will have to pack for myself. My packing consists chiefly of jumping up and down on my suitcase until it will close. I think that's enough about packing for today. In tomorrow's prises. smaller then, yet the money was here and was raised. Shall we do less for ourselves in meeting urgent needs for health?

Each generation lives off of its inheritance from the past. Residents of Salem today are using churches and hospitals and schools that were buillt and paid for in former years, by residents who made sacrifices. We have outgrown that plant. For the present and for the future we must make fresh investment. And we should look nowhere else than to ourselves for money to improve present hospital facilities and provide new

We are in the midst of this campaign now. Again the money is here. It awaits only the will of the people of this community to open their purses and make this community investment, an investment in good health for ourselves and for those whose follow us. Individuals leave what are called "estates." Cannot Salem of this generation leave an "estate" in the way of an expanded and improved hospital plant? It can . . . if it will.

Afghanistan became a political entity in 1747, previously having been a cluster of small states under various rules.

column I will wish bon voyage to myself from you all.

人事的情况到

McNaught Syndicate, Inc.) tonsillitis.

odical" mean? Bv Lichty wasteful spending.

Alvin & Elsie Krug

Silverton, Oregon.

By D. C. Williams

R. 2, Bx. 298

or blot out" ANSWERS,

"provided you are in saw, not as in was. 3. Palsy. 4. Characterized by method or orderliness: systematic. "He came and went with methodical regularity." 5. Obliterate.

Devers to Change Office to Stayton

STAYTON-Joseph M. Devers, jr., of Salem, who has been associated with Walter H. Bell in his law offices here, has bought a half interest in the business and is moving from Salem.

Mr. and Mrs. Devers and their children plan to make their home in Stayton, also.

Underground Lawn Sprinkler Systems COMPLETE INSTALLATION FREE ESTIMATES

PLUMBING-HEATING

279 K COMMERCIAL

said. you are there.' 2. What is the correct pronunciation o f "water"? 3. Which one of these words is misspelled? Palzy, neuralgia, posed new highway route will nia was rated as "pretty fair" with un through a lot of rich farm California growers also reported as bought at added expense and Only a few acres of oats and this from the county taxpayers, yetch have been harvested in the

This article is not written in Willamette valley. In some kecyour reading public will other fields when grain suffered know the facts as they are and winter injury, the crop is very not as they are dreamed. It is thin. The U.S. oat crop is still time we practiced a little econ- at a high estimate however. The omy and stopped some of this July 1 forecast of nearly 1,480,- land. A right-of-way must be holding for better prices.

4. What does the word "meth-5. What is a word beginning with ob that means "to erase,

1. Say, there." 2. Pronounce the a as Reltone markets during the past week. Prices quoted at Portland Tuesday MONO-PAC were $60 a ton. Better English Wheat gives indication in the James Taft & Assoc. Willamette valley of being an exceptionally fine crop, Harold de-228 Oregon Bldg. Vries of the deVries warehouse at 1. What is wrong with this Pratum stated Tuesday. All fields Phone 2-4491 sentence? "I shall go providing are looking "very good", deVries Fresh Batteries For All Aids any sense of spite nor in order tions where oats did not winter and relaxed even in group converto save my own land but just kill, the crop is pretty good. In mation, And no one need know you're 000,000 bushels is only 8 per cent less than last year and is still 12 per cent above the 10-year average. Oat prices dropped at most

Decrease; Oats

Estimate High

By Lillie L. Madsen

Farm Editor, The Statesman

Harvest of barley and oats has just begun with the barley fore-

Benes To Speak on Communist Group In Czechoslovakia

Dr. Bohus Benes, former Czech consul and nephew of the late president of Czechoslovakia, Edward Benes, will give the second of three lectures on International Politics, TONIGHT at 8:00 p. m. in Willamette university's Waller hall. There, will be no admission charge and the public is invited to attend.

"You got everything you might need on your vacation, Gloris? tennis racket . . swim outfit . . fishing license . . marriage licen

unity for a "neutralized" Ger-Unification of Germany was exactly what failed of achieve-GRIN AND BEAR IT