

State Legion Meet Delegates Need Housing

(Story also on page one) American Legion convention officials late Monday night appealed to Salem residents for more help in solving housing and transportation problems for out-of-town visitors. Sepsus Starr, convention housing chairman, reported Monday that all Legionnaires registering thus far have been housed without difficulty but said he expects more than 1000 additional room requests today and urges Salem residents to offer available sleeping rooms for rental by the visitors. Courtesy windshield stickers still are available at the headquarters tent for Salem residents who wish to offer rides to Legionnaires as they see them walking to meetings. Delegates without transportation are being instructed to flag down cars bearing courtesy stickers in order to obtain rides as far as each particular driver is going. Regarding scheduled athletic events, registration for the golf and bowling tournaments reported coming in slowly Tuesday but convention officials said they have received many inquiries about the events and expect large turnouts. Trophies and cash prizes await winners in each of the tournaments.

Police Catch One Lawrence Steele, One More to Go

Lawrence Steele just had the wrong name Monday. He was arrested by a Marion county deputy sheriff on a district court warrant charging him with forgery. But when his fingerprints were checked at the sheriff's office it was discovered they differed from those of the man wanted in Marion county. Officers were about to release him. Then another deputy in the office remembered seeing a poster more than two years ago from Olympia, Wash., saying that a man named Lawrence Steele was wanted on a charge of parole violation. He checked his hunch and called state police identification bureau. This time the records checked. The sheriff's office is holding this Lawrence Steele for Washington authorities. But they are still looking for another one.

NOVELIST ON DANGER LIST

U.S. Producing More Effective Atom Bombs

By Frank Carey Associated Press Reporter WASHINGTON, Aug. 1—(AP)—The United States has gone into production of the more effective atomic bombs tested at Eniwetok in 1948, and has made advances on other atomic bombs, congress was told today. The information was presented by the atomic energy commission in its semi-annual report. President Truman said in a statement that the nation has "reason for assurance and faith" that the atomic program is being effectively pressed, both for defense and human welfare purposes. Answer to Charges This apparently was his answer to the charges of "incredible mismanagement" which Senator Hickenlooper (R-Iowa) made against AEC Chairman David E. Lilienthal. A congressional investigation of the charges has been in progress. The AEC reported: 1. Its Eniwetok-tested bombs—more effective than those used before 1948—are being produced on an "industrial basis." 2. Fissionable uranium and plutonium—the sources of atomic energy for all purposes—are being produced in greater amounts than ever before. 3. Increasing attention was given in the past six months "to reactor development, an item of prime military and eventual civilian importance." (A reactor or pile is a device for the controlled release of atomic energy. It is with such devices that scientists hope eventually to achieve propulsion for aircraft and ships, and also furnish electrical power for industry.) 4. This nation has found new sources of precious uranium in its own backyard—"enormous tonnage" of materials having a very low content of uranium.

2 Men Found Next Night on Mt. Rainier

Patred, 39, of Hoquiam and Dick De Haan, 21, of Tacoma were located by a party led by Leroy Ritchie of Tacoma. The men had separated from two different parties at Camp Hazard at the 11,500 foot level on the Paradise side yesterday. Patred's leg was bothering him, and De Haan became exhausted. Other members of both parties continued on to the summit. They met at the camp and started down the mountain yesterday but became lost and returned to higher ground to spend the night.

NEW YORK, Aug. 1—(AP)—The national amateur golf championship this month in Rochester, N. Of these, 25 players are exempt from qualifying including the entire ten-man Walker cup teams of the United States and Britain, who club at Mamaroneck, N.Y., Aug. 19-20. Willie Turnesa of Elmsford, N. Y., the defending champion, tops the select list. He is Clifford Thompson, 44, former circus attraction, who came from Waupaca, Wis., and announced he would begin law practice here. Nursery, Bulb Firm Charged With Deception

Indications of fraud, deception and misrepresentation were charged by the state agricultural department at a hearing here Monday involving sales of bulbs and nursery stock by the Sherwood bulb gardens, owned and operated by Leslie E. Marcus. The hearing was based on an application from Marcus to renew his nursery license for another year. Approximately 20 witnesses were slated to testify. State agricultural department officials said they had been investigating the gardens for two years following receipt of complaints from customers. Marcus conducts one of the largest mail order bulb businesses in the northwest. Mrs. Merle Holman, Jefferson, complained that she had filed a substantial order with Marcus but had received only part of her order. She said some of the items were dead on arrival. Smaller Bulbs Receipt of smaller bulbs than he had ordered was charged by Dr. H. A. Scullen, Oregon State college professor. He said he based his order on a newspaper advertisement. J. E. Ganger, Canby, testified he received inferior and diseased bulbs while Mary L. Beach, Portland, declared gladiolas she received were less than three inches in circumference. They were advertised as 5 to 7 inches, Miss Beach said. Complaint that he had not received anything yet, after paying for a begonia order on May 2, was voiced by M. T. Madsen, Salem. Jack F. Hurd, Oswego, formerly employed by the Sherwood gardens but now selling his own bulbs, testified that the gardens had made many refunds but apparently had not received any complaints from the Portland Better Business bureau. Couldn't Fill Orders This witness said the gardens were launched in 1946 and the business prospered with the result it was impossible to fill all orders on many occasions. Hurd said Marcus approved all advertisements and sometimes these advertisements featured items not carried in stock. Another witness, George W. Eade, Sumner, Wash., chief nursery inspector for the state of Washington, said he found one gladiola shipment from the gardens in which virtually half of the bulbs were diseased. "I have been watching closely the shipments from these gardens but have found no more with a large percentage of diseased bulbs", Eade said.
