Meat for Sunday

Spiced Tongue Can Be Company Meat Welcomed for Several More Days

By Maxine Buren
Statesman Woman's Editor

Rolling Hills Farm — Unexpected company is usually expected — and welcomed out here just three miles from town, but where there are as wide open spaces and as fresh air as if there wasn't a town within half-a-hundred miles.

I like company, and on a Sunday, there may be anywhere from one, to 14 or 15 for dinner. In summer there's always the picnic grounds, which, though not at all fancy, will hold a large crowd. If the group is smaller or the weather not too good, there is always the dining table and we don't mind perching around the house in odd places for our meal, if the guest list exceeds the supply of chair and table space.

Though my guests are a generous lot, usually bringing all the food and even slightly demurring ("slightly", or shall we say delicately") at my offer of furnishing coffee, I do like to have something on hand every weekend for a main dish "just in case."

Tongue, I find is a practical meat to provide. (Our family likes this meat, especially when it's freed with a sweet-sour sauce. It's a meat that one enjoys as a leftover for several days, in case no guests arrive to help eat it the first day and I have a whole tongue for myself.

Tongue has no waste, is easy to cook and can be completely prepared on the hot plate when I don't want to heat up the range. Tongue is good either hot or cold, and can be used a second time as a jellyed loaf, in sandwiches or in salad.

And best of all, it goes a long way, for the price one has to pay for it — far longer than most any other meat of equal cost.

Here's a recipe for spiced tongue, though not our old family recipe.

The clan decided on the meeting place for next year to be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin J. Van Cleave of Hazel Green.

On Etiquette

By Roberta Lee

Q. What should one do if visiting in a home and one of the members of the family becomes ill?

A. It would be better to insist upon leaving, unless you can be of service in some manner.

Q. Is there any difference in the pronunciation of "fiancee" (feminine) and "fiance" (masculine)?

A. No; both are pronounced fe-an-sa, e as in fee, first a as in ah, second a as in say, accent last syllable.

Q. Is it customary to enclose cards of admission with the invitations to a home wedding?

A. No.

INDEPENDENCE — Employees and their families of A. L. Thomas and Co. Hardware and W. J. Primus and Sons Implement company enjoyed a picnic at Helmick park Monday, August 1. Those attending were Mr. and Mrs. Harold Traylor, Mr. and Mrs. Ernie Thiesman, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Smith and family, Mr. and Mrs. Leo Montoya and family, Mr. and Mrs. George Noyes, Mr. and Mrs. John Eckel and family, Mr. and Mrs. Gus Fisher, Frank Barrett, Mr. and Mrs. Keith Petersen and family of Dallas and the hosts and hostesses, Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Primus, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence J. Primus and Harold Primus.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Jones had as their guests on Friday at their country place, Mr. and Mrs. John C. Douglas and daughter, Dorothy Ann, of Portland and Mr. and Mrs. Victor Crick of Oakland, Cal.

Don't Look Now...

... of course we would miss the exchange of words at the American Legion convention. Somehow our nose for news only leads us to bouquets, luncheons and teas — come to think of it, maybe our's isn't a nose for news, it's a stomach for news.

Secret desire — We just loved the big dog looking hat Mrs. Thorn wore at the daytime meetings. She wore it casually, tipped a bit as if the large bow on the north-east side weighed it down. It's always been our secret desire to own a picture hat — but on us, the bow would droop. It takes a woman with a more impressive figure than ours to carry one off properly.

Low Down — They said the Star Spangled Banner pitched low enough for us. Never before have we been able to even approach the high notes, and on the auxiliary's pitch we simply trilled out with "The rocket's red glare and bombs bursting in air."

Good idea — Serving the banquet to 700 as a cold plate idea, made service prompt and unhurried, and seemed to please the guests. The coffee was hot, and that's what counts.

Family Trait — Mrs. Goode comes by her oratorical gifts honestly. She's a member of Oregon's most distinguished family of orators and preachers, the Polings, and certainly has not let the family down.

Change of Scene — While hundreds of sincere members of the Legion and auxiliary sit in session, working hard, a few merry-makers leave an impression on the town. Let the public respect those who come to accomplish a sincere purpose, and forget the few who come only for fun.

Behind the throne — The auxiliary convention seems well organized and smooth running. Credit certainly goes to Mrs. I. N. Bacon, the chairman, and her two partners, Mrs. Helen McLeod and Mrs. Harmon Judd. And may we give special thanks to Mrs. Mike Ponek, who kept the papers supplied with good, well written publicity, and covered most of the meetings for us. She, like most good press chairmen, gave out with the publicity, but got no fame for her self. Maxine Buren.

loped pink organdy over lace and caught at the corners with clusters of flowers and a pink satin band extending down the middle... Among those present... Mrs. I. N. Bacon, newly elected district president, who has done such a grand job of heading the convention commission, in a white eton jacket suit with orchid corsage... her co-chairman, Mrs. Helen McLeod in a black and pink print... and Mrs. Harlan Judd in white... The tea chairmen... Mrs. Merle Travis in a brown and white print... and Mrs. Albert C. Crags in a becoming blue print gown... Mrs. William DeVall, greeting guests in the outer garden, and wearing a steel blue satin dress... Mrs. W. W. Graham, the state president elect, in a black print silk with turquoise gloves... Mrs. Samuel Bowe from Grants Pass and smart in a lime green ensemble with matching hat... Almost like old days to see three of the famous American Legion quartet members together with their director, Miss Lena Belle Tartar... Mrs. Walter Zosel a symphony in all green... Mrs. Robert Wyatt in a summer print... and Mrs. F. Ivan Brown in a burgandy outfit... we thought sure they would come forth with a tune during the afternoon, but their fourth member, Mrs. Sephus Starr, was away at the beach... and converts with drivers, waiting outside to speed away the officers to the next event of the day... Certainly a busy schedule for anyone to keep and those that attended the 1 a.m. breakfast lated later in the day.

Contrary to the previous announcement of Rebekah drill team practice for Tuesday afternoon, the practice will be held on Monday evening following lodge. Officers will practice both Tuesday afternoon and evening.

Rites Read At Church

The First Congregational church was the scene of the wedding of Miss Elizabeth Rose Guttridge of Salem, daughter of Mrs. Joseph Guttridge of Estacada, and Albert Roderick McMullen, son of the Albert McMullens of Taft, on Sunday, July 24. Dr. Daniel Schulze performed the 2:30 o'clock nuptials, Gordon Pratt of Portland was soloist and Jenn Hobson Rich the organist.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother, Joseph Z. Guttridge, wore a white slipper satin gown fashioned en train and a fingertip tulle veil caught to a headress of pearls and orange blossoms. She carried a white prayer book topped with a white orchid.

Miss Marian Gordon of Parkdale was the maid of honor and wore beige chiffon over peach satin and carried an arm bouquet of cream colored gladioluses. Miss Joan Lawrence was the bridesmaid and wore powder blue brocaded organdy over blue satin and her arm bouquet was of cream gladioluses.

Robert A. McMullen was best man for his twin brother and ushers were Rex Edmondson, V. D. McMullen, brother of the groom, and Richard B. Guttridge, brother of the bride.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Guttridge wore a black crepe afternoon gown with grey accessories and Mrs. McMullen wore a navy blue gown with red accessories. They both had orchid corsages.

A reception was held in the church parlors. Mrs. Carl Zuercher of Portland, aunt of the bride, poured, and Mrs. Earl DeSart, Silverton, cut the cake. Miss Lucille Vellman of West Linn presided at the punch bowl. Assisting were Mrs. Frances Peck, Mrs. R. C. Cutler, Mrs. Charles Koski, Mrs. Neil L. Waghorn, Mrs. Roy Bycock, Miss Wilma Shebley, Miss Ann Peterson of San Francisco and Mrs. Rex Edmondson.

The newlyweds went to Seaside on their honeymoon and for going away the bride wore a grey suit with navy accessories and a white orchid. The couple will live in Salem at 1915 S. Cottage st. The bride is a Willamette university graduate and her husband will enter Willamette university College of Law this fall.
