Just Wait 'til You Have Junior for a Year!

The following wuz received by our ad writer from some little miss who no dowt is gonna learn the kids grammar and things, judging from the following letter: "Busick's Ad Writer, Dear Sir. I am writing this in behalf of better grammar in our schools. I have spent about fouteen years preparing myself for a teaching position and now I have my first position teaching first year youngsters, the only consoling feature about that is these youngsters cain't read, if they could and read your ads i'd be a gonnor for sure." Now we didn't answer that letter for the very good reason it didn't have a name hung on it. Anyway, if the little miss thinks our grammar is a little off color, just she wait till some smart ellick kid pops Junior behind the ear with a paper wad. Right then she's gonna get an ear fulla some real talk . . . unless Junior has changed a lot since we knew him. Anyway, the little school teachig miss may not care so much for our ad writers grammar, but of this we are sure. Being a teacher of youngsters she like the thousands of wise shoppers will be quick to sense the many values so evident at Salem's Downtown Food Market.
