

Sen. Morse Held at Hospital; Bump Buggy Was Costly Item

Admitting that he was a "little sore" but otherwise feeling well, Sen. Wayne Morse was ordered Monday to remain in Salem General hospital for another day or two. But he wasn't discouraged a bit so far as horses are concerned.

Morse, who has been in the hospital since a horse show accident Saturday night, expressed disappointment at being unable to keep a speaking engagement at Lebanon. Earlier he had been prepared for dismissal from the hospital. His planned return today to Washington, D. C., was also delayed.

The senator, who was tossed from his buggy Saturday night at the state fair (his second accident of the week), said "you can tell them that if congress adjourns I'll be back for the Pacific International exposition (at Portland next month)."

"If it's not adjourned, at least I'll be back for the state fair next year for a try at the third (and final) leg of the trophy."

Senator Morse spent Tuesday reading telegrams of sympathy from President Truman and many senatorial colleagues, including Sen. Arthur Vandenberg (R-Mich.) and Eugene Millikin (R-Colo.).

The president said: "I hope you are not seriously hurt and that you will be able to win the prizes before the show is over."

Boulier Back To Art Post At Elfstrom's

Larry Boulier, Salem artist, will resume the reins of the third-floor art galleries of the R. L. Elfstrom store, beginning Thursday morning, it was announced Monday.

Boulier headed the galleries before resigning last January to paint water-colors, in which work he is widely known throughout the west. Last spring, he assisted in setting up activities of the new gallery of the Lincoln County Art center at Delake, and more recently has been connected with the Stayton Mail after finding the coastal climate was not conducive to Mrs. Boulier's health.

R. L. Elfstrom expressed pleasure Monday that Boulier was returning and said he was certain the artist's friends would welcome the move.

Boulier announced several new services would be added, such as home planning assistance including design, color and mural decoration, and that a series of demonstrations was being planned for the assistance of professional painters, amateurs and laymen. Leading western professional artists will be featured in the galleries.

Membership Round-Up for YMCA Started

The YMCA's annual membership round-up got off to a rousing start Monday night with a western-style kick-off dinner at the "Y" building.

Charles A. Sprague, member of the "Y" board of directors, delivered a short pep talk to about 60 team captains and workers. The dinner was held in a dining-room decorated with saddles, bridles, blankets and other western regalia.

This year's round-up opened after the dinner Monday night and will continue through Friday night with a goal of 200 new adult members.

Five Portland Youngsters Polio Victims

PORTLAND, Sept. 12-(AP)—City health authorities today reported five children have been stricken with poliomyelitis in what was described as a "localized outbreak in the southeast section of the city."

Three other cases were reported in the past week in other sections of the city.

Dr. Thomas L. Meador said all the youngsters live "within a stone's throw of each other" in the vicinity of S. E. 32nd avenue and Francis street. Three families are involved. He declined to release the names of the families.

He said the stricken youngsters are three girls, ages 13-14-11 and a boy 18 months old are in hospitals. They suffer paralysis in varied degrees of intensity. The 11-year-old girl is the worst stricken, he said. A four-year-old boy has been returned home with but little paralysis resulting.

Dr. Meador said the outbreak does not involve an epidemic, but warned adults and children to avoid crowds, obtain plenty of rest and avoid unclean water in swimming.

The total number of cases in the year totals 26, he said.

Ten Point Solution Proffered To End Britain Economy Crisis

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12-(AP)—The United States, Britain and Canada today announced a 10-point program which Sir Stafford Cripps said would bring Britain's dollar crisis under control and pave the way for her economic comeback.

The program, announced after steps to give Britain a freer hand in an emergency conference, includes in spending Marshall plan dollars and open the doors of Canada and the United States a bit wider for British goods. The aim is to permit Britain to earn more dollars and conserve those she has.

Cripps, British chancellor of the exchequer, said the three-power decision "certainly" would halt further dangerous drains on Britain's gold and dollar reserves and put the nation in a position to advance economically.

The 10-point program involved four immediate trade concessions to the dollar-short British by the American and Canadian governments.

The first four steps are:
1. Permission for the United States for Britain to use its Marshall plan dollars for a "wider range" of products. Britain had urgently requested this permission, particularly for purchase of Canadian wheat which it has been buying with its own scarce dollars. Under present rules Britain must confine its Marshall plan purchases of wheat to the United States.

2. A pledge by Canada to increase buying of strategic tin and rubber from British areas and a United States promise to review its stockpiling program to see if it can do the same.

The United States also said it is prepared to modify present rubber regulations in order to give Britain's natural rubber exports a greater market in this country.

3. A streamlining of American and Canadian customs regulations to eliminate "red tape" which Britain claims has hindered her shipments of goods.

4. An implied promise that the United States might permit Britain to discriminate temporarily against American imports in favor of goods from non-dollar areas.

The other six steps agreed upon by the three western allies as "long range" help for Britain are:

1. Overseas Investments — A three-nation committee will be set up to outline ways for increasing the flow of private and government bank funds for investment in British areas.

2. Tariff Policy — A statement by the United States that its policy is to seek further tariff cuts within the framework of the reciprocal trade act.

3. Further discussion of ways in which Britain could earn more dollars by use of its merchant fleet to haul exports.

4. More discussion of plans for Britain to buy oil with sterling instead of dollars, thus relieving the drain on her dollar supply.

5. A further study of ways in which Britain can handle the $13,500,000,000 war debt it owes the sterling countries to keep it from interfering with plans for expanded exports and increased production from her industries.

6. An agreement by the three governments to continue consultation on Britain's economic problems.

'Wild Horses' Yet Unclaimed

The stray "wild horses" that Floyd R. McDowell reported were tearing up his grass and sacks of grain Saturday night have been standing quietly in a 13-acre field since Sunday, still unclaimed by their owner.

McDowell Monday night described the two horses as bay and strawberry roan, both geldings, one wearing a bell. He hopes the owners will call him at 3-1365 today or will come to his farm at the intersection of the Vida Springs and Skyline roads, about four miles southwest of Liberty.

Advance Requested to Start State System Building Plan

PORTLAND, Sept. 12-(AP)—The state board of control will be asked to advance $306,000 for preliminary work on the state system of higher education's $6,000,000 building program.

The building committee of the education system board said today the money would be used to prepare architectural plans for seven buildings. These would be the day-

ry and animal industry structure and food industry building at Oregon State colleges, three libraries at the colleges of education, the proposed hospital for the medical school in Portland and the science building at the university in Eugene.

The committee also decided to recommend construction of Oregon State's new football stadium on the campus instead of in the hills west of Corvallis. The full board will take action tomorrow. Approval is virtually a formality.

Engineers said the grandstand and temporary portable bleachers would provide seating for 35,000 fans. Initial construction costs were estimated at $662,000.

The committee said the Hills building site offered some economies in building, but the campus site offered even more. The site is just south of the basketball pavilion now under construction.

With the stadium there it could be built a bit at a time, using dressing and shower rooms of the pavilion, the committee said after reviewing a report by a Portland engineering firm.

The committee also approved final plans for the University of Oregon Heating plant, expected to cost a million dollars. The money was provided by the last legislature. Bids are expected to be advertised Oct. 1.

The finance committee approved a proposed contract with the Portland school board for purchase of Lincoln high school for $875,000. The state would use it for college work. A provision would enable Portland to use the building through 1950-51 school year for 1950-51 school year for day-time high school classes.

Keizer Bond Vote Legality Affirmed

The election procedure by which Keizer school district 88 issued bonds totaling $48,000 was approved as legal Monday by Attorney General George Neuner.

BOARD MEET CANCELLED

New Campaign To Get Blood Donors Slated

A new campaign to recruit blood donors was announced Monday night at the monthly meeting of the board of directors, Marion county chapter, American Red Cross.

The campaign, scheduled to begin October 17 simultaneously with a Multnomah county drive, aims to sign up a reserve list of 4,000 persons in the county.

It also was announced Monday that 160 persons have signed to donate blood between 3 and 7 p.m. tonight at the First Methodist church when the bloodmobile from Portland makes its monthly visit in Salem.

In other business, the Red Cross water safety chairman told the board 490 learn-to-swim and general water safety certificates have been awarded in Marion county thus far this year.

Bush Pasture Development Plan Progressing Well, Council Told

Plans for the development of Bush's pasture, the midtown 100-acre tract for city park purposes, are going ahead, City Manager J. L. Franzen assured the city council Monday night.

He said preliminary work with the park advisory board has resulted in a development plan soon to be detailed for the council's consideration. Since the city became owner of the property, only cleanup work has been done, but area eventually will be developed for playgrounds, sports and picnic purposes, Franzen said.

Aldermen Daniel J. Fry and Albert H. Gilie called for a full report, stating that the public should be kept informed on the proposed park development.

Franzen said the flat area near the new Willamette university athletic field would lend itself to various athletic purposes, with ample room for football, baseball, track and other sports. The south-easterly corner between two creeks could become a small children's play area and the wooded sections elsewhere would make good picnic and general playground sites, he added.

Final action on zoning of new area across the river, surrounding West Salem, was deferred when Francis Smith and Jack Olson asked for reconsideration by the zoning commission. Mayor R. L. Elfstrom said he felt the entire zoning plan should await outcome of the West Salem merger election.

Among new bills presented was a zone change for downtown Court street at Cottage, setting a business zone for three lots. The YMCA and Co. apartments are affected as is the lot between on which Attorney Donald A. Young has planned to build a law office building.

Another new bill would raise the Portland Gas & Coke Co. license fee to the rate of 3 per cent of gross receipts, comparable with the rate electric utilities now pay.

As a result of other council action last night, stop signs will be placed on Columbia street at Front street; parking will be prohibited on the west side of 12th street for 60 feet south from the Mill street "blind" intersection; pedestrian lanes will be painted at Capitol and Marion streets; a small part of Oxford and South Capitol streets will be vacated for abutting property; deeded land is accepted for adding to Hickory and Pine streets, offered by A. J. Flint; and the beer license for Bligh Billiards parlor in a new location on North Commercial street was confirmed over the protests of Alderman Albert H. Gilie that neighboring businesses object.

Other business Monday night, post 136 unanimously approved the recent purchase of property in Pringle park, Belmont and South Cottage streets, from the city of Salem for $350.

Silverton Council Accepts Resignation

SILVERTON, Sept. 12-(Special)—City Councilman Alvin Legard resigned at the council meeting tonight, giving business reasons for his move.

Legard had 15 months of his four-year term left to serve. His resignation was accepted by the council, but no replacement was announced. The mayor is expected to appoint a new councilman soon, subject to approval of the city council.
