

Big, Experienced Trappers Favored Vik Gridders Open Season Tonight at Vancouver High; Mort Crew in Tip-Top Shape

Salem high's hopes for top recognition in the 1949 prep touchdown whirl get their first indication of things to come when Coach Loren Mort and his Vikings tangle with the rugged and respected Vancouver Trappers in the Southern Washington city at eight o'clock (PDST). Coached by the famed "Sandy" Sandberg of U of Washington and Washington State college renown, the Trappers are known to be (1) plenty big, (2) plenty experienced, (3) assessed as the top prep eleven in their part of the Evergreen state and (4) exponents of the T-formation.

Other than for those features absolutely nothing in the way of team information has been forthcoming from Vancouver. The Vikings can match them, on paper at least, in one department. The Mortmen use the Model-T also. They are not classed as a big team, or one loaded with experience. And the Salems are not expected to be one of the major elvish in the state. The Trappers are therefore automatically odds-on favorites for the win in the inaugural. They dumped the Salems here last year by a five touchdown margin.

If it is determination and condition that will snatch the verdict, the Viks have a good chance. Mort has his gang in fine shape both mentally and physically, and poised to upset the enemy. Starters for the Salems, with weights, are Doug Rogers (185) and Don Boyd (165) at ends, Gordy Bacon (190) and Phil Thompson (171) at tackles, Bill Johnson (180) and Bob Hart (160) at guards, Jerry Graves (178) at center, Gordy Moon (175) at quarterback, Capt. Jim Rock (185) and Dale Olson (160) at halves and Deb Davis (165) at full. Such gives the Viks a 175 1/2-pound line and a 171-pound backfield.

Since Vancouver is on Daylight time, the game will start at 7 p.m., Salem time. Station KOCO will carry a play-by-play of it.

By Don Harger (written while on the Rogue River)

Looking out of the windows to the north we can see the star light twinkling in the waters of the Rogue river. Mingled with the starlight are the gay colored lights of myriads of auto courts strung along the river between Grants Pass and Gold Hill like Japanese lanterns at a fancy lawn party. The first time that I saw the Rogue river was in 1921. My dad pitched camp not far above where this is being written. At that time there were very few if any, cabins stretched out along this section of the river. Now it looks like the famous board walk at Atlantic City. I can recall the days in '21 when we camped on this famous steelhead river. There was an old bewhiskered sniper panning gold not far above us. A couple of ragged burros and all the gear that an old sniper carries, were his only possessions. He fished occasionally and once presented our camp with a bright fresh-run steelhead. That was in the month of September also. This September finds things a bit different. The steelhead are not so thick as they were in '21. The anglers are thicker and the fishing areas are few and far between.

Sometimes I believe it is better not to think of the days of long ago and then go and visit the same spot to find it entirely different. It is best to think of it as it was 25 years ago and stay away. That is of course, unless you insist on catching a Rogue river steelhead. A couple of us and our ever loving wives are not interested in steelhead this year. We hear about a place over the hill where trout are as long as your arm. We're leaving for there in the morning.

Luck Not So Good During Visit to Stripper Grounds
At the stripper grounds at Coss Bay we ran into adverse conditions. The strippers were not in the bay in such quantity as they had been a few weeks earlier. On Sunday a northwest wind almost blew us out of the boats. On Monday the tide was wrong. On Monday evening we heard an old "standard" excuse. For a couple of weeks there been some seals in the bay and the strippers had gone into hiding. Now it is all right to fish for strippers when they are out in the open. It is another thing to fish for them when they are hiding in the back sloughs and inlets out of the way of the seals.

The one redeeming feature of the short stay at North Bend was the hospitality of the people. People we had never met before, the Jack O'Connors, did everything that was possible to make our short stay at the stripper waters comfortable. Living quarters were found. Permission was obtained for us to launch our boats at the airport landing ramp. Information as to weather, fishing conditions and tides were given us.

It really makes a person feel that life is worth living when it is realized that there are so many people in this world that are not always thinking of themselves. With the pace that today's world is travelling it is really a treat to find an average American family like the O'Connors of North Bend, willing to forego a Saturday evening at the theater or at a dance to offer hospitality to some outsiders whom they never only by way of a pencilled introduction a couple of days earlier.

Our trip thus far is more pleasant because of the warm handshake of the O'Connors.

Go in After Big Ones in Williamson River
Tomorrow night at this time we will be on the banks of the Williamson river, near Chiloquin. The Williamson is supposed to have big rainbow and brown trout. We have a note to a resident of Chiloquin who claims to know most of the fish personally and who will take us out and show the ropes.

Your writer has never fished the Williamson and if it is as good as rumor has it, I will be ashamed of that fact. Too often I have been asked about the stream of the big rainbow that runs through the Klamath Indian Reservation, without being able to give any answer at all.

That will all be changed. Just what the answer will be remains to be seen, but we certainly shall give the river a beating for two or three days to find out what goes on.

Tomorrow we will get away from this Rogue river spot early and head for Chiloquin by way of Crater Lake and will perhaps take in Diamond Lake on the way over. It is country that a person will never tire of. The tumbling headwaters of the Rogue and the green of the forested mountains will never grow old.

At a neighboring cottage this evening we saw a 3 1/2 lb. cutthroat trout that was taken earlier in the day from the Rogue. It was one of the largest resident cutthroat taken these parts in years. It fell to a spinning lure offered by an angler from Manchester, Vt.

Your writer hopes that the salmon anglers around Salem have cooled off by this time and that the supposed regulations affecting them will have been explained to one and all. If not, I won't be home for another week.

Yankees Lose to Cleveland, Amerk Lead Reduced

Lemon Chalks 20th Victory

NY Now 2 1/2 in Front Rest of Clubs Idle

NEW YORK, Sept. 15-(AP)—The New York defense collapsed today, the Yankees committing five errors, and the Cleveland Indians made the most of the miscues as they rolled up a 10-6 triumph.

The setback cut the Yanks' American league advantage over the Boston Red Sox to two and one-half games. The Red Sox, along with the rest of the major league teams were idle.

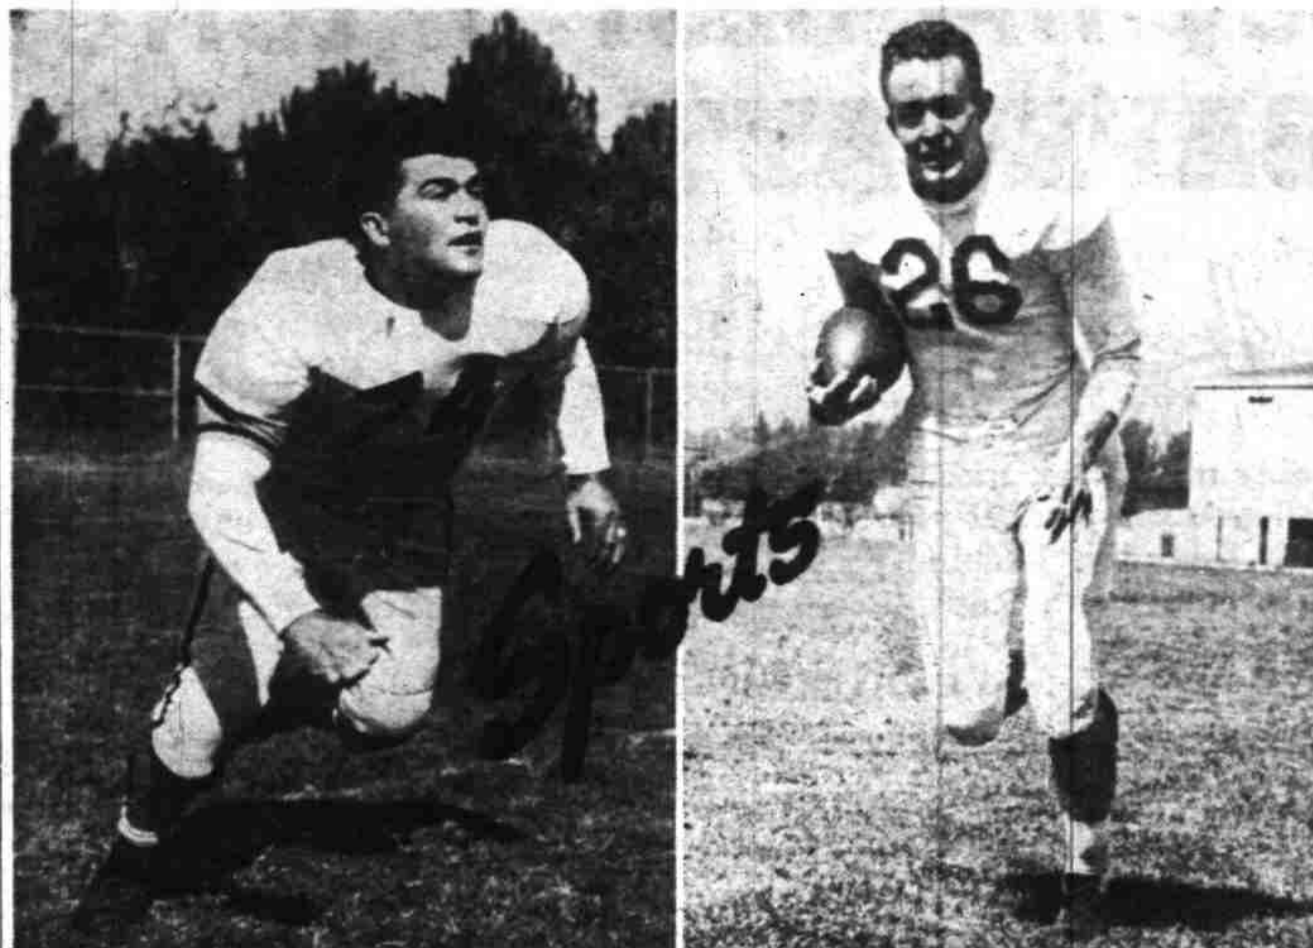

Bob Lemon received credit for his 20th victory but needed help from big Al Benton in the eighth when the Yanks threatened to pull the game out of the fire. Lemon is the Major's third 20 game winner this season. The other two are Mel Parnell and Ellis Kinder of the challenging Red Sox.

The victory enabled the Indians to regain third place from the idle Detroit Tigers, six and one-half games back of the Yanks. Detroit invades the stadium for a two game series starting tomorrow while the runner-up Red Sox entertain the seventh place St. Louis Browns in the opener of a two-game set.

When the Oregon State Beavers and Oregon Webfoots open their 1949 seasons in California tonight, both of these gentils will be in the starting lineups. Captain Tom DeSylvia (left) of the Beavers will be at tackle against UCLA at Los Angeles in a conference game, and George Bell (right), one of Coach Jim Alkie's top back-away backs will face the St. Mary's Gaels at San Francisco. Both tilts loom as tossups.

Favored Gals Gain Semis, Amateur Go

By Whitney Martin
ARDMORE, Pa., Sept. 15-(P)—The Nineteenth hole took on a different meaning today as two California girls, a sturdy campaigner from Georgia and a veteran Pennsylvania competitor advanced to the semi-finals of the 49th women's national golf tournament.

Dorothy Kirby of Atlanta, and Dorothy Kiely of Long Beach, were forced to go that distance to eliminate their quarter final rivals. The two others, diminutive Marlene Bauer of Los Angeles, and Mrs. Mark A. Porter of Manoa, Pa., advanced with comparatively easy victories.

Miss Kirby, who will be right at home in the Eucalyptus round as she twice has been there, defeated the comparatively unknown Mrs. John L. Hulteng of Rummford, R. I., the former Betty Jean Rucker of Spokane, one upon 19 holes. Miss Kiely won by the same score at the same point over Polly Riley of Fort Worth, Tex., in another thrill-saturated match.

Fifteen year old Miss Bauer, girls' junior champion, continued to play the steadiest golf of the tournament in eliminating dark horse Betty Mackinnon of Texarkana, Ark., 4 and 2.

Mrs. Porter, the former Dot Germain, breezed to a 7 and 6 triumph over Janet Brown, Philadelphia girl.

'Experts' Rate Beaver Outfit Slight Underdog Against Ukes

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 15-(AP)—Oregon State's band of football players flew into Los Angeles today to open the Pacific Coast conference season tomorrow night against the Bruins of UCLA.

Good weather and a turnout of 40,000 or more are in prospect for the game.

Kip Taylor, the Beavers' new coach from Michigan State, reserved time for a night workout in the coliseum. He merely smiled when told the Bruins have been generally picked to win by seven points.

Coach Henry R. (Red) Sanders of UCLA was also curious about the selection and termed it somewhat premature.

On paper, Oregon State's first string rates at least on a par with UCLA and presumably Taylor has more reserve strength. The visitors whitewashed UCLA last year, 28-0.

Ken Carpenter of Oregon State and Bruin Ernie Johnson, both operating from the tailback spot of their respective single wing outfits, figure to carry the offensive load in what shapes up as a close game.

Probable starting lineups:
Oregon State Pos. UCLA
Proman LE Riggs
Niemi LT Thompson
Carmichael LG MacLachlan
Gray C McLaughlin
De Sylva RG Nikevich
Simon RT Pastre
Ruppe RE Cogwell
Carr QB Buchanan
Carpenter LH Johnson
Mast RH Watson
Twenge FB Schroeder

Although Oregon finished in a tie for the coast conference title last season, St. Mary's scrappy team will be a favorite tomorrow night.

Starting lineups:

Robinson RB McGeehan
Dotur LT Mapelli
Daniels LG Sullivan

Nevills RT R. V. Johnson
