McKay Expects Tax Increase For Oregon

Increase in state tax revenues in line with expanding industrial and agricultural activity was predicted by Governor Douglas McKay in an address before county assessors at the opening of a two-day in-service training program here Tuesday.

The program was arranged by the assessment and taxation division of the state tax commission of which Robert Maclean is director.

Governor McKay said Oregon's population growth, fastest in the nation, is necessitating additional job opportunities which can only come as the result of new business and farm operations. The governor said this would broaden the tax base and result in greater tax income.

Explanation of new tax laws approved by the 1949 legislature and now in operation was given by Howard E. Roos, assistant attorney general. Appraisal of industrial property was discussed by Jesse S. Gilkey, supervising appraisal engineer for the state tax commission.

Other speakers included Arthur A. Selander, chief appraisal engineer, who discussed application of the new factor book, and Harry J. Logan, also an appraisal engineer, who explained methods of compiling the factor book.

Cost of the factor book will be discussed by Robert V. Nelson at Wednesday's sessions.

Civil Defense Heads Confer On Programs

Setting up a working program of civil defense and disaster preparedness in Oregon, under a 1949 legislative enactment, has been launched here with indications the organization will be completed within a few weeks, officials announced Tuesday.

Conferring in connection with the project here were Gov. Douglas McKay, Louis E. Starr, Portland, director of the agency, and a number of other persons including Deputy Director Thomas E. Rilea.

Starr said existing governmental agencies would furnish the basis for local civil defense groups with such minimum additional personnel as is necessary to give Oregon an adequate organization to cope with possible disaster whether war-borne or natural in cause.

Other officers of the organization are Manly F. Robinson, Dr. Harold M. Erickson, state health officer; John M. Poorman and Jack A. Hayes.

Family Titles Of Pioneers in Planned Book

Names of every family in Oregon in 1850 will be contained in a valuable historical record now being compiled by David Duniway, state archivist.

Information for the compilation is being obtained from the federal census records. Most of the population at that time, according to Duniway, was concentrated in the Willamette valley and on the coast. The 1850 census showed a population of 13,294.

Duniway said he had encountered some perplexing problems due largely to the fact that the census takers wrote down the family names by ear instead of having members of the family write them down.

In the 1850 census, Duniway said, the pioneer Marion county Abst family was spelled App. Spellings of French-Canadian names added to Duniway's worries, he said.

Approximately 2,000 copies of the book will be published, Duniway said he later would prepare a similar book based on the 1890 census when the state's population was 317,704.

Duniway predicted that the book based on the 1850 census would prove helpful to historians and other persons who desire to trace their families.

Every family head will be indexed, both by sound and by spelling.

Farm Bureau Head Assails Bill for CVA

Lowell Steen, president of the Oregon Farm Bureau federation, told the Salem Kiwanis club Tuesday he did not believe the "demand" for a Columbia Valley authority came from the Pacific northwest, and that the senate bill designed to form the authority did not protect states' rights.

Particularly criticized were provisions which would grant three $17,500-a-year commissioners the right to tax for water rights, restrict farming and circumvent civil service in employment.

"The best we could hope for" under the proposed CVA would be "a benevolent dictatorship, government by men instead of law," Steen declared, and cited that 207 organizations, 82 per cent of the newspapers and six of the seven governors in northwest states had gone on record opposing it.

Easier dish washing... you'll find the secret in petroleum

It may seem like a long trip to your dishpan, but a good share of the "soapless soaps" you use started deep in the earth in an oil well.

These new cleaners, called detergents, actually make water "wetter"... attract dirt and grease almost like a magnet. They make dishes sparkle, work well with all fabrics in hard or soft water, clean cars, and they have many other home and industrial uses.

The practical means of making detergents from oil came out of Standard of California research... by risking substantial sums for experimentation and development. The results: new products to make your work easier, new manufacturing and selling jobs, a company better able to serve you and all the West.

STANDARD OIL COMPANY OF CALIFORNIA
plans ahead to serve you better
