

Benson Leads Prison Guards Over Escape Trail; Tells of Sleeping Near Prison Annex

By Lester F. Cour
Staff Writer The Statesman

Haggard and dejected after a rattle, three-month flight from police, Convict William P. Benson led prison officials and newsmen over the wooded escape trail taken by himself and John O. Pinson May 30 in a desperate break from the Oregon state prison.

The 44-year-old desperado, handcuffed and led on a chain, unfolded an amazing story as he retraced the route leading from the prison to Turner, 6 miles southeast of Salem.

Benson, serving five years for armed robbery in Portland, revealed that he and Pinson knowingly rested within sight of the prison annex a short time after their early-morning escape. The same day, he said, they slept within a few feet of prison convicts cutting wood on a tract about one mile south of the prison farm.

But the voluble convict with a Texas drawl again changed his story concerning the party's flight to Portland and steadily maintained that Pinson, convicted murderer serving life in buried near Kellogg, Idaho, dead from gunshot wounds incurred in the escape.

Benson, captured in Columbus, Ohio, September 5 after attempting suicide by swallowing poison, was unable to lead officers to Pinson's grave early this week on the return trip to the Oregon prison. Warden George Alexander and other prison officials indicated Thursday they believe Pinson is still alive.

Benson talked freely Thursday, telling how he and Pinson saved their way out of the "bullpen" about 1 a. m., May 30, scaling the 25-foot east wall in a hall of gun fire from a guard tower. He contends Pinson incurred the fatal shoulder wound in the flight.

"I hurt both of my feet when I jumped from the wall," Benson continued, "and from then on they practically killed me." Both men were barefooted.

Benson led Guard Captain Ellsworth Herder, Guard Don Johnson and newsmen from the penitentiary south through the state forestry buildings. He said they stopped momentarily in Mill creek between the buildings and South 25th street to the west side of the Salem airport.

Here, the men headed east toward Turner on roads near the Southern Pacific railroad track until reaching a hill in back of the prison annex, four miles east of Salem. Wary and foot-sore, the fugitives lay near the annex for an hour before hobbling along the right-of-way to a small mill about six miles west of Turner.

"There was a beehive near the mill," Benson told reporters, "and that caused me a lot more trouble. I got stung in about 20 places trying to get some honey. We were awful hungry."

Benson showed how he and Pinson walked across the tracks a few hundred feet from the mill and bedded down for hiding out Monday. He said they could see convicts cutting wood about 50 feet away. He led officers to the spot where they fastened slippers from a strip of tin with a knife in an attempt to alleviate their cut and aching feet.

Herder found the tin slippers and asked Benson why they hadn't worn them. "They just wouldn't work; they were worse than nothing," the convict replied.

Walked to Turner
The barefooted pair walked to Turner Monday night securing bandages for Pinson's wounds, clothes for both and shoes for Pinson from the Turner sawmill, according to Benson. They slept near the mill pond Monday night and in a field east of Turner Tuesday.

At this point Benson's story changed radically from the one given prison officials on his arrival in Salem Tuesday. The convict told Warden Alexander he and Pinson crossed the Willamette river at Salem by floating to West Salem on a log, and then had proceeded to Portland.

Boarded Freight Train
Thursday, however, Benson told newsmen they had boarded a freight train at Turner Tuesday night, getting off at Albany.

He said they stayed in Albany until Sunday when they boarded a freight train for Portland. He said they stole two .38 calibre revolvers and a pair of shoes from a cabin near Albany during their stay.

Benson said he and Pinson stayed in Portland three days, two at a hotel and one in a rooming house on East Burnside street. "The Japanese owner of the rooming house got eyeing us suspiciously," Benson told the reporters, "so we moved out fast."

The escape trail, according to Benson, then led to Seattle, Ellen-

Pinson are suspected in Boise, Idaho. He said he had never been there during his wanderings. Police believe, differently.

Wary Thursday afternoon after tracing the escape trail, the grey-haired convict said: "I'm ready to go back to the bullpen. I'm tired to answering questions. It'll be a good rest after all the traveling I've done. I should be out of here in three years."

Prison officials didn't share his optimism. And they indicated the questioning would continue until they extract the truth from Benson.

Benson denied any complicity in armed robberies for which he and Pinson obtained money to travel by bus. "When you start asking that you're talking trouble for me," he declared.

Benson Displays Tin Shoes

Recaptured convict William P. Benson, handcuffed in the center as he retraced his state prison escape route, is pictured Thursday displaying a pair of crude tin slippers which he fashioned with a knife last Memorial Day, shortly after he and John O. Pinson, convicted murderer, escaped. On his left is Ellsworth Herder, guard captain at the prison, and on the right Guard Don Johnson. The guards found the crude slippers in the woods near the prison farm annex, about five miles southeast of Salem, where the men hid out the day of their escape. (Statesman photo.)
