Federal Invasion of Farm Marketing Field Expected To Raise Heated Discussion

Invasion of the farm marketing field by the United States department of agriculture, through commodity credit corporation is expected to come in for heated discussion at the approaching annual convention of Agricultural Cooperative Council of Oregon to be held November 14 and 15 at the Multnomah hotel, Portland.

R. A. Ward, manager of the Pacific Wool Growers, and widely known throughout the Willamette valley, returned Monday from Chicago where he attended a special meeting of representatives of OpNational Council of Farmer Co-operatives and the National Federation of Grain Co-operatives.

The invasion of the USDA is a threat to the best interests of American agriculture, the representatives charged at their session. Ward said, upon his return, that representatives of farm commodity marketing, associations for grain, wool, cotton and tobacco agreed upon the declaration summarized to include:

The marketing groups emphasized that the development that was criticized does not follow the conscious design or intent of the president, the secretary of agriculture or congress.

They expressed belief that farmers and consumers will not gain by substitution of programs of action by the government in place of free enterprise activity by individuals, partnerships, corporations and by farmers themselves through their co-operative marketing associations.

Such activity by the government lends to inefficiency, high costs and abuse. The declarations point out that the many problems incident to commodity price support and purchase programs do not require substituting government activity for free enterprise. Instead, these problems require teamwork of the highest order between government and the skill, wisdom and know-how acquired through long experience by men and institutions specializing in finding markets for the many products of American farms.

The joint special meeting, Ward said, charged that the policy of the government moving into the farm marketing field also marks a reversal of the long standing government policy to foster and

DA's Request For Additional Help Deferred

Marion county court Tuesday deferred until the first of next year a request from District Attorney E. O. Stadter, jr., for additional office help.

Stadter said his office has handled more than 400 criminal cases this year. His office, he pointed out, serves a district court, six justice courts over the county, the circuit court and legal matters for county offices.

The district attorney suggested the hiring of either of extra office girl or another attorney. The county court said the matter could be taken up in January when yearly figures are in and budget expenses ascertained. Two assistant attorneys and an office secretary are on the district attorney's staff.

Protest Against Portland Bar To Get Study

Gov. Douglas McKay said Tuesday he would refer to the Oregon state liquor control commission for investigation and complete report to his office a complaint of a group of Portland citizens who are protesting against the operation of Andy's Tavern at 6001 S. E. 72nd ave.

The delegation, including State Representative Joseph Harvey and state WCTU President Mrs. Ruth Tooze, appeared before the governor and presented him with petitions signed by a majority of residents of the three blocks area north, south, east and west of the bar dispensary. The petitions requested that the tavern be closed. Their alleged grievances against the tavern boiled down to objections to its location. They said the tavern is located across the street from a residential area and near a park.

County Given Priority On Health Office Site

Marion County Judge Grant Murphy secured from the state board of control Tuesday a priority on a tract of land near the Salem general hospital.
