Strong Farm Groups Urged At Gathering

Statesman News Service
CLOVERDALE — The Turner Farm Bureau met at the schoolhouse Tuesday at 8 p.m. President Eddie Ahrens conducted the business meeting. New members recently signing along, a pie for Mrs. John Powell, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Booth and Arthur Gath.

Members of the state office in Salem, who were present, were Marshall Swearingen, state vice-president; Elma Schroeder, state secretary, and Bill Howard, director of information.

It was brought out by Swearingen that this country is in great need for strength of unified agricultural organizations, and that members should get to know the type of such when they belong to them.

A program was given by members of the center. A motion was made that a pie social would be held along with the November 22 meeting and that each lady should bake and bring along a pie for that occasion. Money is to be used to buy kitchen equipment for this gathering.

The Turner Home Extension club met on Wednesday at the Cloverdale schoolhouse. Hostesses for the lunch hour were Mesdames Schampier, Fritz, Sawyer, Wheelton and Kaepfelli.

During the afternoon business session a written ballot was taken to designate whether or not the extension club was to be continued, or if the old time Clover club would be picked up again from where it was dropped during war years. The vote was 14 to retain the extension and five to drop it with a good number of persons not voting either way. The present officers were to be retained and meetings will continue on the third Wednesday of each month. Later a change may be made in the meeting day if the Clover club organizes and so desires to again use the third Wednesday which was the original meeting date.

It was decided that the Extension club would sponsor a 4-H club and Mrs. L. Newkirk's cooking club was chosen as the one to use. Also this group voted to help sponsor Azalea house.

Eleanor Trindle gave a review of unifying home furnishings. The club will meet in November at the schoolhouse.
