

Dr. Cory Asks More Money For Education

MONMOUTH, Oct. 22—(Special) "It is a myth that U.S. people love their children best, when tested by the way our citizens spend their money," Dr. Stephen Cory, outstanding American expert on elementary school curriculum, told valley educators at a banquet meeting here tonight.

Formerly at Chicago university and now on the staff of Columbia university, Dr. Cory is at present engaged in field work for the Horace Mann-Lincoln Educational Institute making a check of educational procedures throughout the U.S.

Dr. Cory listed statistics of how American spend their money to show that they think more of cosmetics, girdles and cigarets and spend more on them than they do on education for their children.

About 200 educators from the mid-Willamette valley, heard Dr. Cory caution that too much emphasis is being placed in the high schools in producing leaders when democracy needs both leaders and followers. "The chief purpose of high schools is to produce citizens, scholars, but to produce fine citizens," Cory said.

Dr. Cory emphasized that pupils must be taught what is of interest to them or what they can use. "If they don't use it, they lose it—and fast," he said. "It is a waste of time teaching pupils things in which they are not interested," he added.

Newsmen Left In Wake of Truman Yacht

SOLOMONS ISLAND, Md., Oct. 22—(P)—White House reporters turned sailors today in a futile attempt to make contact with President Truman who is taking a week-end cruise aboard his yacht, the Williamsburg.

After driving 60 miles from the capital they boarded an open launch and chugged 12 miles out into a choppy Chesapeake bay only to see the Williamsburg steam off down the bay.

They had hoped to be on hand when Mr. Truman anchored for the night at the nearby Patuxent naval air station as they expected, but instead, the Williamsburg returned to Blakiston Island in the lower Potomac river.

The president is due to return to Washington tomorrow.

Switch to Allow U.N. President to Cut Off Speakers

NEW YORK, Oct. 22—(P)—All the United Nations assembly president will have to do now to shut up a speaker is turn a switch.

Secretary-general Trygve Lie has instructed electricians to install a master control on the president's desk. This will cut off the public address system and the simultaneous translation equipment when a speaker refuses to obey orders to stop.

This goes a step beyond Assembly President Carlos Ramulo's instructions to the interpreters last Thursday to stop interpreting after he bangs his gavel.

Romulo's order was made when Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky refused to obey the chair's ruling that his denunciation of the election of Yugoslavia to the security council was out of order.

100,000 New Jobs Visioned as Result of Dam Expansion

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22—(P)—Senator Magnuson predicted today that the McNary and Chief Joseph dams on the Columbia river will ultimately mean 100,000 new jobs in the Pacific northwest.

He said they should mean an industrial expansion potential of $1,000,000,000 or more.

He based his estimate on a formula of the expected developments from each additional unit of electric power.

Magnuson reported that congress this year appropriated more than $1,000,000,000 for "investment in natural resources and other development" in the Pacific northwest.
