October Hatchery Output Sets Record; All Areas Show Rise

The largest output of record from commercial poultry hatcheries was made this October, reports from the United States department of agriculture, released Tuesday, show.

The total hatchery production of chicks during the month was 62,678,000 chicks, which is 34 per cent larger than the five previous high output for the month was in October 1948 when hatcheries produced 46,810,000 chicks.

The demand for chicks for commercial broiler production continues strong although not as strong as during the past several months. The number of eggs in incubators on November 1 was 5 per cent smaller than on the same date a year ago. The number of chicks booked on November 1 for December delivery was 7 per cent smaller than on November 1 a year ago.

It is not just in October that the output of chicks increased during the past year. While not so great, the increase in output has been larger for the past 10 months, an increase of 24 per cent for the entire period. This was the third largest output of record for these months.

Largest increase in chicks hatched was in the east south central states where it is listed at 65 per cent. In the Pacific coast states the increase was but 15 per cent, and with the increase of population this takes care of itself, producers report. Even a larger increase could be used here, reports show.

Another poultry record made in October, Tuesday reports show, is the record rate of lay and the

County Studies Culvert Plan; Calls Road Bids

Marion county court has under advisement a proposal from Salem city officials that the county construct a culvert and drainage ditch on Silverton road near Hollywood avenue.

At a hearing Tuesday between the court and City Manager J. L. Franzen and Engineer J. H. Davis the city agreed to deepen the drainage ditch. The county is pondering the advisability of erecting the $3,950 culvert and rebuilding the ditch at a cost of $1,754.

The court Tuesday afternoon advertised for bids for paving Brenna avenue and Jelden and 34th streets, just east of Salem. The bids are to be opened at the courthouse December 12 at 10:30 a.m.

Sealed bids are asked for on grading, graveling, drainage work and surfacing with asphalt. Plans and specifications on the job are available at the county engineer's office. Cost of the improvement will be assessed to the property owners along the road.

At another hearing Tuesday estimates for improving Morningside and Peck avenues, south of Salem, were revealed. The cost will be $212 per foot along each property line adjacent to the streets. The matter was tabled until December 2 to give property owners time to consider the matter.

Candlewood Residents Petition Street Work

Thirty-two residents of Candlewood drive in an area just north of Salem petitioned Marion county court Tuesday to improve the street.

"The dedicated road needs grading and graveling between Cherry avenue and Pleasantview drive, the petition states. The cost is to be paid by the county who in turn is to assess property owners along the street, according to petitioners. The court will review the matter Tuesday.

Community Duty Told to Ease Unemployment in County Areas

Helping to relieve unemployment is as much a responsibility of the community as it is of state agencies, Silas Gaiser, administrator of the state unemployment compensation commission, said Tuesday.

Primary duty of the state employment service, said Gaiser, is to supply qualified workers to employers who place orders with the service. "Need," he stated, "is not the first consideration of the employer."

The commission reported Tuesday that 4,100 are unemployed in the Marion-Polk county area. Only 3,750 were jobless by the end of November of last year.

"Even though we have a large number of jobless in this state we have not reached a crisis," declared Gaiser. "This time of year unemployment always creeps up and it will take the combined efforts of community leaders and the employment service to alleviate it."

An increase in population, a short seasonal work program this year, and an increase in the number of workers who did not receive a large enough salary last year to qualify for unemployment benefits this year, were main reasons given for the boost in unemployment.

The number of "casuals" or jobless workers, who, for some reason or other, are not eligible for unemployment compensation totals 1,800 in this area. This is 300 more than last year at this time.

Discussed at Meeting Benefits last week went to 1,072 as against 922 at this time in 1948. Of last week's number about 30 per cent were laid off cannery workers. Last year 57 per cent were ex-cannery employees. This means, said the commission, that many unemployed food processors are not receiving benefit payments this year and that other industries are contributing more heavily to the covered unemployment load.

The jobless situation was discussed Tuesday morning at a meeting of the commission. Gaiser said he thought the employment service could do something for the "casuals." He suggested a program to build up a reserve of part-time jobs.

"Many of the casuals now are qualified men. And if given part-time or odd jobs now to help make ends meet they will eventually adjust themselves."

Service Duty Given Gaiser stressed the main function of the employment service was to screen applicants for jobs and to supply employers with qualified workers.

"We also have to be careful," said Gaiser, "so that we don't drive down the price of labor by referring workers to jobs which we consider to be below prevailing wages."

Gaiser expressed hope that community programs could be worked out which would recruit odd-jobs and part-time employment to relieve the annual jobless lists. He referred to a plan in Portland in which a group of nine civic clubs have secured a total of 806 jobs for qualified veterans.

The ordinance prohibits any person to be on the streets of Portland between 1 and 5 a.m. unless he discloses a lawful purpose.

Justice James T. Brand, writing Tuesday's opinion, said: "A person complies with the ordinance if in going upon the street he has disclosed a lawful purpose. The use of the streets for the purpose of going to or from points within the city or for the mere purpose of walking for exercise or for merely social purposes, is a lawful use whether in daytime or nighttime and such use of the streets is for a lawful purpose."

"He goes upon the street as an innocent man entitled to the presumption of innocence and he need take no affirmative action to demonstrate his innocence. The lawfulness of his purpose is disclosed by his use of the streets for the purposes for which they were established. He must be deemed innocent unless his voluntary conduct overcomes the apparent and presumed innocence of his movements by disclosing a purpose to violate some law other than the ordinance in question."

The suit attacking the ordinance was filed by Mr. and Mrs. Calvin W. Goodwin, who were fined $25 each for violating the ordinance.

Yugoslavian Tells of Terror Under Dictator

Wholesale slaughter of prisoners of war and political opponents were described graphically Tuesday by Dr. Joseph Veic, Yugoslavian physician who is under sentence of death in his native land.

The doctor, in speaking to the Salem Kiwanis club at the Marion hotel, told of being warned to remove a crucifix from a hospital, on the grounds it represented a "superstition" not in accord with views of an all-powerful commissar. He also described the wanton slaughter of 80 hospital patients to make room for Russian soldiers.

"There is no freedom in any way," Dr. Veic said. "You are told what to do and what to think. Every side of your life is under a terrible control. You never know what is going to happen."

Dr. Veic, who served on hospital staffs of General Tito's military forces after escaping from a German concentration camp, said American democracy might not be perfect "but its 100 per cent better than anything communism could ever offer." He is in the United States as an "escapee," and hopes to remain.
