

Power Firm to Serve Santiam Area Despite Outcome of Vote

DETROIT, Nov. 23—Opponents of the Detroit-Idanha merger-incorporation proposal claimed a point today when the Benton-Lincoln Electric cooperative announced it would serve customers in the area even if incorporation is voted down.

The announcement came from Don Corliss, representative of the co-op which will supply Bonneville power to the permanent U. S. engineers housing project and the new U. S. forest service camp, both above Detroit. The co-op is already serving the Detroit dam project.

Proponents of the proposed merger and incorporation of Detroit and Idanha, led by Idanha Justice of the Peace Edison Vickers, have contended that incorporation is necessary to make the area eligible for Bonneville power. They also state it is necessary to insure an adequate water supply.

The cities, four miles apart, are now served by the Idanha Power company, owned by Paul Reynolds. The Lincoln-Benton co-op has attempted to purchase the facility, but rejected Reynolds' offer as too high.

The organization will complete the 7 1/2-mile right-of-way clearing from the Detroit dam site to the Breitenbush bridge above Detroit by February 1. Bonneville lines will then be installed immediately.

Meanwhile, the battle over the proposed merger and incorporation will go into Marion county circuit court in Salem Monday. The faction favoring merger of Idanha and part of Detroit will attempt to obtain a restraining order barring a December 9 election proposing incorporation of Idanha alone.

If the court turns down the request, the December 9 election will proceed under orders of the Marion county court. Should a restraining order be issued, voters will decide December 12 whether Idanha and a section of Detroit should be merged and incorporated.

Lyle Thomas May Oppose Rep. Norblad

PORTLAND, Nov. 23—(AP)—State Rep. Lyle D. Thomas, secretary of the Oregon Farmers Union, came out today as a possible opponent to U. S. Rep. Walter Norblad in the republican primary election.

In the Farmers Union monthly publication, Thomas said he would be available if "adequate finances" and "sufficiently aroused interest" are forthcoming.

James T. Marr, secretary of the state federation of labor, which recently announced it would not support Norblad, said he would be enthusiastic about Thomas' candidacy.

"I don't know where the republican party could look for a better candidate," Marr said.

Thomas, considered a liberal republican, is a former educator who was principal of Dallas junior high school and of West Salem schools before accepting his post with the Farmers Union. He has served in the state legislature from Polk county for six terms.

Both Store, Customer Dissatisfied

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Nov. 23—(AP)—A department store and a customer were mutually dissatisfied with a transaction today.

The 17-year-old customer returned shortly after buying an expensive cigar lighter and complained it wasn't any good.

Meanwhile the store had found the customer's check for $124.22 wasn't any good.

Detectives Al Wisneski and Ernest Deal gave chase when the customer fled from the store and caught up with him.

Police are holding the youth. No charges have been filed.

Snag Silences Keizer Phones

KEIZER, Nov. 23—Telephone service was restored for families living west of Keizer school this afternoon after a snag had fallen across wires near the Clyde Cook residence on Lakebrook road about 7:30 a.m.

A telephone company spokesman said service had been interrupted for about 25 users.

The Keizer fire department also was called out when the incident started several shrubbery fires, some near the Cook residence. Firemen had to run a half-mile with extinguishers because the fall had blocked the road.

Lewis Calls Policy Committee Meet

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23—(AP)—John L. Lewis was reported tonight to have called a meeting of his United Mine Workers policy committee, to be held in New York Monday.

This report, from a source which asked that his name not be used, followed earlier ones to the effect that Lewis and the coal operators may resume negotiations next week.

Lewis and the operators have been waiting a peace overture from each other for almost a week.

Crew Finishing Breitenbush Road Project

DETROIT, Nov. 23—District Ranger S. T. Moore announced today that forest service crews will complete most of the improvement work on the Breitenbush road by December 1.

The widening project between Detroit and a point six miles above the Breitenbush Hot Springs were started early this summer. About 25 men will remain at the Breitenbush forest camp to continue work on the road through the winter.

Moore also announced that work will get underway soon on construction of a new forest service camp at Marion Forks. The old camp must be replaced to make way for new fish hatchery facilities at the site.

Oregon Pulp Mill Worker Due at Confab

Gerald Beach of the Oregon Pulp and Paper company in Salem will be one of the participants in the governor's first annual state industrial safety conference scheduled to open November 30 in Portland.

Beach, a member of AFL loggers and sawmill workers, local 3050, will appear with three other persons before the sawmill and woodworking section of the convave.

About 450 delegates are expected to attend the convention, including several out-of-state persons headed by Alexander R. Heron, San Francisco, who will give the banquet address.

Heron is vice-president and director of industrial relations of the Crown Zellerbach corporation.

Police Radio Links Salem To Portland

Point-to-point radio contact between city police and Portland authorities was in effect Wednesday.

The new service does not mean the frequency of the Salem police radio station has been changed, however. Police spokesman said that it was an addition to present equipment which has not been changed.

Instant communication between the two cities is now possible and will be an aid in reporting escapes and exchanging information, they added. The Portland equipment is located in the Multnomah county sheriff's office which has intercommunication with city police there. Salem's unit is in the radio room on the second floor of city hall.

It is the first link in a proposed chain of point-to-point broadcasts to connect police in major Oregon cities. The broadcasts will not reach Salem city police cars.

Two-Thirds of Salem's Streets In Paved Class

Almost two-thirds of the total length of dedicated streets in the city of Salem is covered with high-grade paving, city engineer's office report showed Wednesday.

This-up-to-date tabulation, including recently merged West Salem, shows 129.2 miles of dedicated streets in the city, of which 84.5 miles are paved with asphalt or concrete surface.

Another 5.7 miles is in the intermediate surfacing class, mostly of oil base macadam, raveled for year-around use are 35.5 miles while 2.5 miles are unpaved.

City Engineer J. H. Davis prepared the figures for the National Board of Fire Underwriters which recently conducted a fire protection survey here.

Many-Titled Man Is 'Just Plain Joe' To Close Friends

MOBILE, Ala. —(INS)—Joseph N. Langan of Mobile is ready to rival anyone in titles and jobs. He was state senator and will try to be the same again next year.

Langan resigned to become a member of the Mobile county board of revenue.

He is a colonel in the Alabama national guard. He is a professor at Spring Hill college. He also is a student there. And he finds time to be a member of the state board of education. Not only that, but he makes the main part of his living as a practicing lawyer in Mobile. To his friends, he's just plain Joe.
