"No Favor Sways Us, No Fear Shall Ame" From First Statesman, March 28, 1851

The Oregon Batatesman

THE STATESMAN PUBLISHING COMPANY CHARLES A SPRAGUE. Editor and Publisher

ered at the pastoffice at Salem, Oregon, as second class matter under act of congress March 2, 1879. Published every morning. Susiness office 215 S. Commercial, Salem, Oregon. Telephone 2-2441.

The U.S. Takes a Stand

The United States finally has some sort of a foreign policy for the far east. Now that a stand has been taken, let us stand loyally behind it. The most pressing of the two great questions in Asia has been answered. President Truman had to decide what to do about Formosa; he has decided to keep out of the fight between the Chinese communists and our old allies, Chiang Kai-Shek's nationalists. This is not a do-nothing policy. A do-nothing or sit-on-the-fence policy is what we had put up until now. Now we have a definite non-intervention policy. It is the wisest course of action in a dilemma which closely resembled the classic position between the devil and the deep blue sea. At least we are no longer at sea.

The second urgent question is whether or not to recognize Mao's government and thereby totally abandon the nationalists. Washington has made no official declaration but Truman's statement on Formosa practically assures that the U.S. will make the obvious diplomatic gestures. Those who wanted to continue stalling and those who definitely advocated continued aid (including American men and arms to Formosa) to the nationalists and who opposed recognizing Mao are quite upset about Truman's decision. They are particularly offended because the White House did not ask their advice. U.S. policy for Asia is not a bipartisan effort; it is an administration fait accompli. The fact that one republican faction (Taft, Wherry, Hoover et al) doesn't like it, doesn't change it.

But the fact that they don't like it may endanger the bipartisan foreign policy conceptand that's unfortunate. Even if the republicans did not have their say in official meetings, they amply expressed their opinions via the press. They should therefore accept the new policy for what it is: a national stand without partisan considerations.

It is essential in a democracy for every side to present its views on important issues while decisions are in the making. But once they are made, it is essential in a democracy for its citi-- zens, no matter what their political bias in domestic affairs, to present a united front to the world.

Result of U.S. Aid to Greece

The news that the anti-communist Greek goverament collapsed Thursday was almost inaudible among all the noisy headlines about the state of the union here and the state of disunion in the far east,

In fact, what little information has come out ece has been buried in the inside ever since the war there ended. You'd think Americans would be more interested in the outcome of their multi-million dollar investment in that Mediterranean country. Everyone is so concerned about U.S. aid to Tito in Yugoslavia and U. S. handling of the China-Formosa problem that we've all but forgotten that Greece (and its neighbor Turkey) were the first foreign nations to capitalize on the U. S.-Russian cold war. The Truman doctrine of "containing communism" grew out of communist threats to take over the governments of those two strategically-located countries. Britain; for reasons of her own, and America, "champion of freedom-loving peoples," were quick to help them keep their right to self-government. So we sent surplus ships to Turkey and war material plus military advisers to Greece. We also sent food, medical supplies, farm machinery and other aid toward reconstruction. The guerrills warfare went on and on, back and forth; first one side on top and then the other. Reports on who was winning-Generalissimo Alexander Papagos for the Greeks or General Markos Vafiades for the red guerrillas-varied from day to day.

Then Marshall Tito next door to Greece started acting up. By some strange coincidence, the communists seemed to lose interest in Greece and turn their attention to Yugoslavia, Markos was reported purged. Papagos emerged as the great military hero-his victories partly due to Tito's defection, partly to American aid. Anyway, the consensus was that the U.S. had "won" in Greece.

Now, this week, the coalition government which, under Sophoulis and Diomedes, helped quell the red rebellion, has resigned. This does not mean a setback for U.S. interests in Greece. On the contrary, it may mean further assurance that Greece will maintain her independence.

Papagos resigned as chief of the armed forces this week, too, and the way seems clear for him to step into the political vaccum. As a hero he is tremendously popular with the people and already he talks like a politician. He has said he opposes dictatorship, favors "honest" democratic government" and wants to see the people's living conditions improved whether by leftist or rightist methods.

All we really know about Papagos is that he is partly responsible for whatever success the American campaign has in Greece, and American aid is partly responsible for whatever personal success he has.

If the old soldier can bring some stability to Greece, it will represent a victory for the Truman doctrine and Greece will become a case in point cited by those who want the U.S. to help Tito.

When manufacturers came out with bright white enameled cooking stoves, housewives were only too happy to get rid of the old black iron ranges. Now some of the ladies seem tired of all that white porcelain equipment; it makes their kitchen look too much like an impersonal laboratory. So what's the latest fad? Why, black stoves again! Only now they're touted as "dramatic" and "glamorous." On deck are ranges in a wide range of "personality" colors such as chartreuse and fire engine red. Maybe they ought to put out a nice brown-speckled stoveone which wouldn't show spilled coffee.

Mrs. Lowell Cree, The Statesman's correspondent at Mill City, sends in an item which can hardly be classed as news but which bears reprinting, regardless, because of its general connotation. Referring to recent inclement weather, Mrs. Cree writes that "rain or shine, Mill folks have their Stat liable carriers, Leroy Podrabsky and Maurice Bassett." It is a well-earned plaudit, and the fact that it also applies to so many other Statesman carriers is a matter of pride. It was nice of Mrs. Cree to note it.

ESTABLISHING A COLD WAR BEACHHEAD

JONAH, SAME OLD WHALE!

Guidepost Literary

JONATHAN EDWARDS, by Perry Miller (Sloane; $3.50). The Indian wars in western Massachusetts 250 years ago have always interested writers look-ing for excitement and thrills. But for savage, bitter fighting without quarter, they would have done better to take up the story of Jonathan Edwards. What Northampton did to him, says this biographer, was as close as anyone could come in that age cumbent Robert Elfstrom; alderto a crucifixion. and eighth wards, incumbents in

What he did to Northampton, however, was to incite its sin-ners to moan, roll and writhe in the aisles of his church. When he asked them to profess the faith to which they had borne and averaged 13 hours a day in

SAME OLD

Protestantism, and Edwards is the quintessence of Puritanism," says Miller. Abiding within the realm of Calvinism, Edwards would ask the state highway comwhich gave free rein to the ac-quisitive spirit resulted in his

Detroit Man Sentenced in Pinball Case

Earl Edward Layman, Detroit, pleaded guilty to a charge of pro-moting a lottery and was given a 30-day jail sentence, to be sus-pended upon payment of a $350

man waived investigation by the

Load Limits

when the power went off. Since the machine did not show the PORTLAND, Jan. 6 -(IP)-Unofbonus when power returned, it was ficial returns indicated today that said that Layman reimbursed him in cash to enable the plays. The complaint was made, the attorney said, after Layman had charged the withess with obtaining money by false pretenses. Also appearing in circuit court Friday were Richard Paul Morris, who had pleaded guilty to a charge of burglary and was continued again to January 13 for sentencing after he expressed interest in en-tering the service; and Burnell A. Raphael, who pleaded guilty to a tering the service; and Burnell A. Raphael, who pleaded guilty to a charge of sodomy and was sent to the state hospital for 30 days' ob-servation. Protests Filed Against Road campaigned on an anti-CVA plat-

A number of protests were re-ceived at the state highway de-partment here Friday

partment here Friday against Thursday's order of the state high-way commission reducing load limits on 42 highways of the state. Most of the protests came from logging operators who declared they would not be able to operate Slates Dinner

The 29th annual dinner and installation of officers of Salem's Board of Realtors is scheduled January 14 at the Chamber of said the order was necessary to preserve the roads while frost is in the ground. They said the order would be cancelled as soon as the would be cancelled as soon as the st., as new board president. Claude Robert C. Maguire, Portland at-Some haulers indicated they H. Murphy, state real estate com-would ask the state highway com-missioner, will be in charge of the dinner.

be reduced one-half as a result of Highway department officials Comm said the order was necessary to Rob mission for a hearing with a view At Friday's board meeting, Bour-ne stated that Salem needs more industry. "People will come here if we provide them with something to do," he said. of modifying the temporary order. Traffic Survey Burr Handed nevertheless stiffened it. Learning from both Newton and Locke, he reached the conclusion that man is worthy not by his will but by God's the striving which brought commer cial success was inoperative in the spiritual field. In part his apparent reversal of his position on the covenant, and in part his attack on the relaxed beliefs

The "foremost philosopher" of his day, inspired by a vision of Christ's kingdom in America rather than merely impatient to be rid of England's obnoxious tax collectors and judges, he appears here in his full stature, the hero of a great tragedy. The story is in the philosophy, and

Miller is not a man to write down to his readers; it is a distinguished and memorable bio-

Hollywood

on Parade

Clift was hugging and kissin Elizabeth Taylor when I looked in on the set "A Place in the Sun" the other day. And he was getting about $1,400 a day for doing

HOLLYWOOD - Montgomery

Held in Salem

at a profit under the new regula-tion. It had been predicted that operations of some haulers would his study. "Puritanism is the essence of the commission's order.

Deputy S. R. Tice of the Marion county sheriff's office will continue to work the Santiam canyon territory temporarily, Sheriff Denver Young, said Friday. Tice, who had taken the shift while Deputy Edgar Scott was va-

The action came in Marion Deputy Scott returned from his vacation Jan. 3 and is now on day. county circuit court, where Lay- duty out of the Sheriff's office.

Deputy Tice to

Keep Santiam Run

main waived investigation by the grand jury, to which he had been bound over by district court earlier in the day. After pleading guilty, his attorney presented an argu-ment for mitigation of sentence. This included a statement that the complaining witness had been entitled to a large number of free plays on the pinball machine, when the power went off. Since

An SOS for blood donors has gone out from the Red Cross for its humanitarian blood-bank program. Fewer than 40 persons have signed up for the mobile unit scheduled to be at the Methodist church from 2 to 6 p.m. Tuesday and leaders say the list of prospective donors is at the lowest point on record. The program carries the endorsement of the Marion-Polk County Medical society and is well worthy of aid.

New automobile models have "broadened" the market, a headline in the Wall Street Journal declares. They've broadened more than that. The wide chassis could mean wider garages and more space required for parking. About the only thing the new cars don't broaden is our pocketbook. But they certainly look nice.

W. W. McKinn such noisy witness, the out, rightly fearful of getting Quite a good many persons are hearing the buzzing of the political bee, are figuratively blowing dandelion bolls --- "she loves me, she loves me not.""A few have announced their plans. Others will step forward soon and declare themselves.

One factor that must be bothrsome now is the campaign expense. No, longer will "$40 and a Ford" suffice as in the Sam Brown campaign for governor in 1934. Printing costs are higher; so are advertising costs. Even postal rates are higher on circulars and postcards; and gasoline, too, for touring the state or county.

5666115

(Continued from page 1.)

at the May primaries: Offices to be filled include mayor, in-men from second, fourth, sixth order, Albert Gille, Dan J. Fry, Tom Armstrong, Walter Musgrave; treasurer, incumbent Paul

Hauser; municipal judge, incum-

While most salaries of public fficials have increased, the limits of 15 per cent of one year's salary for the candidate's own expense in the primaries and 10 per cent for the general election are too narrow for any hot campaign. Beyond that the candidate must rely on donations of his friends, and sometimes they are not very generous.

Truman Speech Portrays False Calm

By Joseph and Stewart Alsep WASHINGTON, Jan. 6-These are times, it seems, when the ap-perance and the reality of politics are divorced assess beyond remedy. The president's recent message congress, so and supeptic, represents the appearance. The best current symbol of the reality is the investigation now being quietly Juscph Aleon the American government's highest scientific advisors and certain other top policy-makers. The subject of this investigation is, very simply, the desira-bility of launching another vious reports in disclosed the debate within the government about this hydrogen bomb project.A fundamental is-Steamst Alsop sue of high policy and grand stra-tegy is also involved, which must now be dealt with.

The key fact about the sudden drive to build a hydrogen bomb as soon as possible is the fact that this drive originated immediately after the explosion of the Soviet atomic bomb. Until then, our sole possession of the urani-um-plutonium bomb had been a great source of confidence, not to say complacency. In the last regarded as a sure foundation ing a hydrogen bomb or contructof our security. The explosion in Siberia ended all that, ing intercontinental guided missiles, the Soviets can at least do later. Indeed, if our scientists

. . . The collapse of the 'American stomic monopoly" therefore caused an immediate search for a substitute. The substitute is now to be the hydrogen bomb. In the grim competition to devise weapons of total destruction, we are to keep just one jump ahead. And this "American lead" is to replace the former "atomic monopoly" as our security's new foun-This idea of the "American lead" is crucially important, if only because it is the president's chief justification for the current impairment of our normal arm-ed strength, in the interests of economy. The idea appeals to every American instinct of op-timism and self-assurance. But it nonetheless conceals a basic deception.

great project like the Man-hattan district, in order to build . . . Let us grant that maintenance of the "American lead" is possia hydrogen ble, despite the almost total disbomb 1,000 or more times array of our research and development program, and the total dedication of the Soviet economy more powerful than the bomb to war purposes. The direction of military invention - the place that fell on Hiroshima. Prewhere this "lead" will logically take us - is towards more and more horribly destructive weapons, delivered greater and great-er distances, at higher and high-er speeds. Today, the research-ers envision hydrogen bombs carried in pilotless jet aircraft guided by automatic celestial narigation. The imagination shrinks from what the researchers may be thnking about in another decide, provided, of course, that the whole process has not been rudely halted in the interval. . . .

Furthermore — and this is cen-tral — the explosion of the Soviet atomic bomb has shown us, once and for all, that a "lead" is all we can hope to maintain. What

Running for office is no longer a poor man's occupation. Candidates do well to set up expense budgets before they file for office and then make sure they will have the necessary funds to carry them_through the campaigns. But candidates traditionally live on hopes and many will enter without counting the cost.

Politically, 1950 will be a busy year even if it is not a presidential year.

weapons may still be superior. GRIN AND BEAR IT But our society will not permit the little end of the bargain. Born in 1703, entering Yale at 13, a Congregationalist but not hesitating to fill a Scotch Presbyterian pulpit in New York to launch his turbulent career, he showed up in Northampton in 1726, preached there until he was ousted in 1750, went to Stockbridge, and finally to Princeton in 1758, where he died within a few 'weeks. He was the sort of man who got up at 4 in the summer and 5 in the winter,

Better English By D. C. Williams

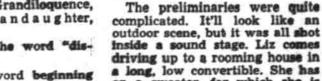

1. What is wrong with this sentence? "We shall be there Saturday evening at 8:09 p.m." 2. What is the correct pronunciation of "garnishee"? 3. Which one of these words is misspelled? Grandiloquence, grammarian, grandaughter, granary. 4. What does the word "disconsolate" mean?

5. What is a word beginning with eq that means "patience: composure"?

1. Either say, "We shall be there Saturday evening at $:90," or, "Saturday at 8:00 p.m." 2. Pronounce as spelled, gar-nishsee, and not gar-an-shee as so often heard, 3. Granddaughter. 4. Deeply dejected; sad. "We were moved by the tears of this disconsolate man." 5. Equuimity.

graphy.

on a sweater, for which she is admirably suited, and a cute white jacket. Director George Stevens has sent her into the scene with a pat on the back like a football coach sending a player onto the field. "Crash! - She rams her car into an old coupe parked at the curb. Liz chews one nail with a cute expression of guilt while Stevens yells "Cut!" and a grip jeers, "Lady driver!" Liz backs her car up 70 feet and starts over. By Lichty

She gets out of the car and throws pebbles against Clift's second-story window. In a minute he rushes out the front door and down the walk. They embrace and kiss. These aren't Liz's first screen kisses - she was

Income Tax Robert Taylor's wife in "The Conspirator". I asked Clift later if the work is as much pleasure as one might imagine. "You mean do I like doing as many takes of these scenes as we do?" he echoes. "Yes, I'm miserable when 1570 Market St. Ph. 2-6569 they're over." Between scenes, Liz rushes off for more of her three hours' daily schooling. Clift invites me into his dressing room. This handsome 29-year-old ex-Broadway actor is making his fifth movie. He likes movies better than the stage as an acting medium. "There's a wider range and scope.

Clift is wearing a leather jacket. His dark brown hair is parted far over on the right side. His eyes are blue, his nose big and faintly hawklike. His face is lean. Licking his upper lip is a man-nersm. He has a quick, diffident, junior-Fairbanks-type grin. There's a dimple-like scar on his right cheek. When he was 13 years old, he walked through a plate-glass window in a friend's ome in New York.

Clift lives in a third-floor hotel suite in Hollywood and spends most of his Sundays sleeping. He has no time for his hobby of still photography, he tells me before ing to the set. Then he and Liz slide into the leather-uphol-

1.7 .

Copr. 1990, Sun and Times Co fic using state highways which run through Salem is being con-ducted this week by the state high-

Officials said the check is

Please accept my profound thanks for your editorial re armed intervention in Formosa.

Such action as you have gener-ally stated could only be regarded on the Asiatic mainland as notice to the world that we were setting up a last bastion of white imperialism to bolster a thoroughly discredited Chiang Kai Shek regime, against the wishes of at least 99 per cent

Your honestly realistic stand

L. E. Huey

1148 Oak St.

enabled to find their way.

Returns

Made Out by

Consultant

No. Cherry Ave.

W. Coburn

highways.

Valve

To the Editor:

of all Orientals, hobby?

ducted this week by the state high-way department. Rubber cords which register the number of webicles using these the because from the state hospinumber of vehicles using these tal's criminal insane ward, was highways are stretched across var-lous sections of Center, North Cap-day in Marion county district itol, South Commercial and Court court.

Burr waived attorney and preliminary hearing when arrain throughout the year on all state on charges of stealing a car which he has told officers he and Marion outine one which is conducted Watson used in the escape. Burr was captured last week in San Diego, but Watson is still at large.

The Safety COCOA PROJECT

KUALA LUMPUR -(P)- Malaya is getting into the cocoa pro-ducing industry. As a first step the Malayan Federation govern-ment has ordered 6,000 cocoa seeds from the Gold Coast.

> GUARANTEED WATCH - CLOCK JEWELRY REPAIRING REASONABLE PRICES The Jewel Box 443 State One Door From Western Union

Phone 3-8862 or 2-4431

ANSWERS

these hideous new weapons to be used on the mere whisper of a dictator's order. Theirs will. Their advantage will then be greater than ours. This kind of vision of the future - herein simplified and crudely drawn to bring the basic point within newspaper compass -has led some officials to recoil in horror from the hydrogen fall behind. If hydrogen bombs are to be built, we ought to be and policy makers are arguing about a hydrogen bomb project, one suspects that the Kremlin must have launched one already. Even if we maintain our "lead," process must thus pro

a totally new situation in the end. Each side will eventually be able to destroy the other. Our the first to build them. On the other hand, the same considerations have also helped to stimulate demand for a new look at the problem of international control of atmic energy. An overture, indicating receptiveness to suggestions, has been received from Moscow. The new look is being pressed by David E. Lilienthal and certain eminent scientists of the general advisory committee of the atomic energy bomb project. Obviously, however, if a world armaments race is on in earnest, we cannot safely committee of the atomic energy commission. Their advice is not to be lightly disregarded. A great new effort to find a sure basis for world peace ought certainly to be made. And if this efort is now made and fails, it will be time to stop deceiving ourselves. The president tells us everything is just Jim Dandy. But nothing is Jim Dandy, and nothing will be, until the ghost of future war now haunting the world has somehow been laid. (Cogyright, 1950,

95

