Sport's 12 Top Performers of Year Named

"Top Perormers of the Year" In twelve major sports were anunced today by Sport magasine's board of experts headed by Grantland Rice. The magasine also named Tommy Henrich of the New York Yankees as "Athlete of the Year."

The "Top Performers", who will receive their "Oscars" along with Henrichs at- a mammoth dinner sponsored by Sport on Jan. 19 in the Astor Hotel, New York, are: Jackie Robinson, base-ball; Leon Hart, college football; Otto Graham, pro football; Alex Greza (now a pro), college bas-ketball; Ray Robinson, world welterweight champion, boxing; George Mikan, pro basketball; Sammy Snead, golf; Sid Abel, hockey; Panehe Gonzales, tenmis; Mel Patton, track; Steve Brooks, jockey; and Joe Verdenr,

The panel of eleven experts headed by Rice, dean of sportswriters, made the selections for Sport after nominations for the "Top Performers" were submitted by subcommittees of specialists covering the twelve sports. More than 100 prominent writers and sportscasters were members of the subcommittees. Henrich's nomination as "Athlete of the Year" by the editors of Sport was based on the conclusion that he was the most outstanding in performance, leadership and character during 1949. The winner in 1948 was Lou Boudreau, player-manager of the Cleveland In-basketball opener here and walked off with a 58-50 victory. The teams switch to the WU gym in Salem for another clash Saturday

Off to a flying start the torrid Salem Methodists galloped to a 16-point lead midway through the first half. Big Loder, who hit 22 points for his evening in all, pumped in 14 in the opening 20 minutes of play as the visitors laid down a steady barrage. It was 33-22 for Willamette at halftime.

system all the way, began biting into the Bearcat lead as the game slowed considerably in the secslowed considerably in the sec-ond half. The scrappy Linfields finally pulled up to within three points with two minutes to play. But just when it appeared as if the home towners might pull the victory from the fire, Loder hit for another field goal, Hugh Bell-Inger canned a free toss and Lou Scrivens meshed another two-pointer on a cripple to pull the WS's out in front comfortably.

While Loder was leading the pointmaking with his 22, and had ample help from Scrivens with 12, it was the backboard play of Doug Logue that made possible many of the points. He was one of the top performers on the floor.

In the prelim the Linfield Frosh pasted the Bearkittens 45-37.

The Bearcat varsity now joins Pacific and College of Idaho atop the conference standings. The highest point total of the evening.

sophomore center sensation, launched a comeback attempt then. His efforts cut Oregon's halftime margin to 28-23, and en-abled the Staters to catch up in the second half at 32-32. The score was tied six times thereafter. With four minutes re-maining it was 44-all, but Sowers, who tallied 15 points for the night, dunked a field goal.

Ted Tappe of Washington State got a free throw five seconds later, then the big Conley, who totaled 21 points, hooked in a shot from the key to give Washington State a 47-46 lead with 3:15 minutes remaining.

Ed Gayda, Washington State's veteran forward, made it 48-46 with a free throw, but Bob Lavey on a pass from Sowers scored a cripple to knot the score at 48-all. That was the last tie. With 21/4 minutes to go Dale Warberg got a free throw to give Oregon a 49-48 lead.

The two-minute rule set in then, and Oregon kept possession until only a half-minute remained. Washington State then got the ball only long enough for one shot. In their desperation, the Staters left Oregon's Jack Keller uncovered. Oregon recovered the ball, and a long pass gave Keller a lay-in just before the gun to make the final score, 51-48.
