Power Lines Thought Cut By Airplane

LEBANON — Several power lines, which may have been slashed by a low-flying airplane, disrupted power in the Stayton, Scio, Crabtree, Sublimity, Shellburn, Kingston, and Lyons areas Sunday and Monday.

The power lines were cut where they cross South Santiam river about three miles north of Crabtree. The break occurred where they wing high over the river at mid-stream. The break, coming at about 10 a.m. Sunday, affected about 600 families and the Western Veneer company plywood plant at Griggs about three miles northeast of Lebanon.

Four 7,200-volt lines cross the river and three were cut, said Willard Grant, district manager of the Linn and Marion county areas of the Benton-Lincoln Electric Co-op.

Harold Jones, owner of the Western plywood plant and Howald Hevlin, superintendent, told Grant that they had seen a plane plying over the river just prior to the time of the break.

Power crews were repairing the break Monday and service had been restored to the private residents early Monday morning. Service to the veneer plant is expected to be restored today.
