Sidewalk Inspection One-Third Complete; Repair Notices Out

Salem's first intensive sidewalk inspection in a decade is approximately one-third complete, and about 1,000 repair notices have been issued, according to City Engineer J. Harold Davis. But the checking, done mostly since last August, is dormant right now until the weather again permits outdoor concrete work.

Since the program's purpose is principally safety, cooperation by property owners is reported excellent. John A. Beebe, head chairman in the engineer's department and in charge of the sidewalk survey, said notices have brought about 75 per cent compliance.

The city has had no general sidewalk campaign since before the war. Up to last February, when the inspection got its first start, repair notices had been issued only following complaint as to conditions.

Already Beebe has covered the city from Mill street north, between the river and 12th street. The southern and eastern areas of the city will be viewed this year.

Growing trees whose roots have pushed up sidewalk sections are the greatest cause of trouble, said Beebe. When he finds broken or otherwise unsafe walks, he presents to the owner, agent or renter a notice reading: "Please have this sidewalk repaired within ten days." It relates the location and the complaint.

Sidewalk replacement done by contractors has been costing an average of about 35 cents per square foot, Beebe reported, with considerable variation possible due to amount of clearance needed.

Replacement work of any extent also makes possible laying the sidewalk at the proper level, on a grade rising one-quarter inch above the curb for each foot away from the curb. Requirements also call for the inside of the walk being

Many Car Drivers Termed Disgrace

Too many automobiles are operated by people "incapable of operating them," and the motor vehicle accident situation in the United States is a "disgrace," Capt. Walter Lansing of the state traffic safety division told Salem Kiwanis club Tuesday.

More laws do not constitute the answer to the problem of accidents, Captain Lansing said. He cited personal responsibility and consideration as major factors necessitated.
