Newest Research Eliminates Rinse in Washing, Use All-Purpose Detergent

By Mrs. Genevieve Smith
The corridors of one of Fifth avenue's plushiest hotels were fragrant with the odor of freshly washed clothes drying on the line, as all day long a no-rinse method of laundering was demonstrated to the press the other day. Yes — one load of family wash after another was put into a washing machine, washed in an all-purpose detergent suds, put through the wringer — set at as tight a tension as possible — and hung out to dry. You can try it yourself, for the detergent is the same all-purpose formula of Tide that is on every grocer's shelves. This no-rinse method is possible because the chemical action of the detergent and the agitation of the washer detach the soil from the clothes and keep it suspended in the water. The wringer in removing the water also removes the soil that is in it. No, not all — for whatever water is left in the clothing has some soil, of course. But scientific tests show that this is so negligible that it makes no noticeable difference in the appearance, fragrance, texture or feel of the clothing. As far as germs are concerned, they are killed in the washing, drying, and ironing process by heat, detergents, and fresh air. As part of the demonstration, we saw identical garments, towels and linens that had been washed eight times by the no-rinse method and by the accepted washing-and-two-rinse method. There was no perceptible difference in their appearance. The point is made that this method is not recommended for heavily soiled garments, such as men's work overalls and the like. Nor is it recommended by the manufacturer for soap. Of course, to any homemaker the no-rinse laundry method offers obvious saving in time, work, fuel and water. If you try it and don't like it, it's easy enough to revert to the rinse method. Too, if you think white things are not as white as usual, they can be rinsed every other laundering, or at longer intervals. Tests show that the residue of detergent left in the fabrics does not weaken the fibers. (Copyright, 1935, General Features Corporation)

Creamed Codfish, Pot Roast Among Good Old Favorites Still Popular

By Maxine Buren
Statesman Woman's Editor
One of our favorite dishes in the old days was creamed codfish, which we usually had on hot biscuits. Another favorite was creamed chipped beef, served either on biscuits or baked potato. The fish was usually freshened all day in cold water, but it might be put into cold water and brought to the boil several times, using fresh water each time. The fish was then flaked and put into white sauce. Another old favorite which we have never ceased to enjoy, is corned beef with cabbage. We like our corned beef to be cooked very slowly, only in simmering water, and the cabbage quartered and added not too long before dinner. We also like to make a boiled dinner of it by adding whole onions and a carrot or two. If you are looking for a money saving meat, serve pot roast, it's usually well liked and helps cut down on the meat bill along toward the last of the month. To vary the pot roast add some dried fruits along toward the last of the cooking. Or you might use tomato instead of water for the liquid. You might use herbs in the sauce, or make a Spanish sauce with green peppers and onion with tomato as the liquid. Don't lose track of good old hamburger cakes for an occasional dinner. From the number of hamburgers put across the tables to young diners, middle aged men and women and even those in the elderly class, this is one of the most popular of dishes. Buy only meat you are sure of, if your meat man says his hamburger is good meat, and you trust him, there's no use buying ground round at a much higher cost. Good hamburger is merely made from meat cut off the more expensive steaks and roasts and is every bit as good as ground round. Poor hamburger might be just about anything. Trust your meat man, or go to someone whom you can trust. One reader says she makes large flat cakes of hamburger, rolls them in prepared buckwheat pancake flour and fries them. The buckwheat flour gives excellent flavor to the cakes. Regular pancake flour is good, but the buckwheat is better.

Miss Margaret Fisher Bride Of Sunday

Mr. Fisher gave his daughter in marriage and her bridal gown was of white nylon net over taffeta fashioned with a train, and shirring, embellished the bodice at the neckline and the short sleeves. With her gown she wore short mitts. Her fingertip veil cascaded from a dutch style cap with shirring. She carried a colonial bouquet of pink roses, white bouvardia and violets centered with a white orchid and edged with nylon net. Miss Jean Gilmer, the honor maid, wore an apricot faille taffeta frock and bridesmaids were Miss Jeannie Mowery of Roseburg, sister of the groom, and Miss Shirley Etzel, cousin of the bride, who wore aqua faille taffeta frocks. They were designed with full skirts, short sleeves and shirring on the neckline. Their colonial nosegays were of violets, Tallman roses, stock and snapdragons and in their hair were bandeaux of net and matching flowers. Thomas Dillard of Roseburg stood with the groom as best man and seating guests were Charles J. Thompson, Rendall Young and Wesley J. Ashworth. Parents Here for Rites Mrs. Fisher attended her daughter's wedding in a maroon suit with winter pink hat and gloves and black accessories. Her corsage was of maroon and white cypripedium orchids. ## The Designing Woman

By Elizabeth Hillyer
FIVE TABLES FOR ONE
Don't be too sure that one more table is all you have room for. If your kind of warm hospitality means a houseful of guests for buffet suppers and midnight snacks, try this trick to provide comfortable extra table space when it's needed without crowding the room all the time. A nest of tables takes up no more space than one. The originator of this new design proves that five tables can be nested as easily as the usual three, and he cancels the complaint that nests of tables are nuisances to move. His quintuplets are lightweight and fit together so that all five can be picked up at once. The wood in these tables is unusual. Tops are sap stained, walnut and shade light to dark, palomino color to strawberry roan. Legs are a rosy mahogany. Pages of color schemes, ready to put to work, are only part of the color help you will find in Elizabeth Hillyer's booklet, COLOR SCHEMES FOR EVERY ROOM. The booklet tells you how to choose a color scheme and how to use it. Send 15 cents in coin, and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Miss Hillyer at this newspaper and we'll send you a copy on its way. (Copyright 1935 by John F. Dille Co.)

On Etiquette

By Roberta Lee
Q. Is it now considered proper for one to light one's own cigarette before that of a companion, so as to avoid the taste of sulphur that person's cigarette?
A. No; this taste is in evidence only during the first flaring of the match. Light your match, and if you wish, wait just a second before applying it to your friend's cigarette—then light your own.
Q. If a woman is wearing a corsage pinned on her coat when entering a restaurant, what does she do with it?
A. She takes it off and pins it on her dress where it will show off to much better advantage.
Q. Is it proper to have ushers, when having no bridesmaids, at a church wedding where about 100 guests are expected?
A. This is not only proper, but necessary.
