

Rossellini, Photographer Trade Shoves

ROME, Feb. 4—(P)—Roberto Rossellini, the Italian film director who specializes in realism, tussled with a news cameraman three minutes tonight outside the hospital housing Ingrid Bergman and her infant son. The clash was bloodless, but sound effects were loud.

"Scoundrels," Rossellini shouted as he jumped from his new American motor car at the gates of the Villa Magherita clinic.

"This is enough, enough. When are you going to stop this?" Rossellini seized Photographer Jack Birns of Time and Life magazines and shook him violently. Birns, who comes from Los Angeles, shoved Rossellini right back.

Other photographers snapped the scene as the two 185-pounders jostled each other. Both are about five feet, 10 inches tall. Rossellini is 43 and Birns 31.

Asks Man Arrested
Turning to a uniformed policeman, Rossellini ordered "Arrest this man."

The officer ignored the order. Rossellini then turned and stalked into the hospital where he has been living since the Swedish film actress, still legally the wife of Dr. Peter Lindstrom of Hollywood, gave birth to the boy Thursday night.

Later, Rossellini's chauffeur came downstairs and apologized on behalf of the director. He said Rossellini was excited and upset.

Birns was understanding. Director Forgiveness
"I forgive him," the photographer said. "I'm a father too."

The Vatican newspaper Osservatore Romano sharply criticized the publicity given the case. Without mentioning Miss Bergman's name it compared the interest in her motherhood to that which attended the birth of the daughter of Rita Hayworth and Prince Aly Khan. It referred to the flood of news stories that covered the arrival of Miss Hayworth's daughter, Yasmin, December 28.

"Now," said Osservatore, "another has been unleashed upon the birth of another baby, which has crowned a so-called 'romantic affair' that is described, illustrated and commented upon without sparing space or expense; an affair which, in the face of divorce laws, invoked but not yet applied, is and remains therefore, openly, undeniably and clamorously, a violation of conjugal fidelity."

Sea slugs brought $1,000 a ton at Canton, China, before the war, says the National Geographic society.

DUTCH HERO HONORED—Sculptress Gra Rueb works in her studio at The Hague, Holland, with a full sized sketch and working model of a statue to a legendary hero, the boy "who saved Holland by putting his finger in the dyke." Finished statue will be set up on the Eye Polder, at Haarlem, Holland, built in 1611 and one of the country's largest dykes.

Lord Norman, Noted British Financier, Dies

LONDON, Feb. 4—(P)—Lord Norman, who headed the Bank of England longer than any other man in its 256 years, died in his sleep early today.

The spruce financier, whose trademarks were a van dyke beard, conservatism and secrecy, was better known as Montagu Norman. He was 78.

King George, upon the recommendation of Winston Churchill's government, made him a baron in 1944 when he retired after 24 years as governor of the Bank of England, 19 years longer than any of his predecessors.

Lord Norman was known as "the sphinx of Threadneedle street"—the address of the institution which was banker to the government, lending its funds, carrying its accounts, managing its gold and issuing its money.

Mostly Rumor
There rarely was any precise news about Montagu Norman—only rumor, speculation and surmise. It was said he thought in millions and spoke in monosyllables. In his career he gave just two newspaper interviews and made one speech.

The interviews totaled 11 words. In 1926, upon returning from the United States, he was asked what he had been doing, and replied, "my mind is a complete vacuum."

In the midst of England's 1931 financial crisis, he told reporters, "don't believe all you hear."

Government Took Over
Though the Bank of England did the government's business, it was privately owned until 1945, when the labor party put through the measure to make it a government institution. It was not even England's largest bank. At least five other institutions are larger.

But, as governor of the Bank of England, Norman was the counselor of a long line of prime ministers and chancellors of the exchequer, the government ministers who preside over the treasury. His financial power throughout the British empire and the world was enormous.

GOP Prepares Foreign Policy Blast at Demos

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4—(P)—A statement sharply criticizing the administration as having failed to consult with republicans on many major foreign policy issues was about ready tonight for submission to GOP congress members Monday.

The declaration, being prepared for use in the congressional campaigns this year, was said to blame many of the world's present ills on "secret" wartime and postwar international deals made by the democratic administrations.

It was reported to promise cooperation with the democrats on foreign policy—as was done in the GOP 1948 platform—if republican members are consulted in advance and have a share in making decisions.

The foreign policy section was regarded by its drafters as one of the key declarations in a 1,500-word statement of how the republicans stand on major issues of the day.

In general, the statement was said to call for budget balancing, decentralization of governmental power, equitable labor laws, and federal help to promote state education and health activities. These are some of the positive things included as alternatives to democratic measures which the statement attacks.

Puyallup Area Crops Suffer During Cold

TACOMA, Feb. 4—(P)—Loss of thousands of dollars in ruined fruits and vegetables in the Puyallup valley due to the last three weeks of cold is coming to light, it was disclosed here today.

Moderating weather, melting the snow that has covered the fields is bringing into view many acres of garden truck that has failed to withstand the recent low temperatures.

As an illustration, one of the numerous truck farms in the valley, Colonial Gardens, reports a $20,000 loss. Half of this amount is in six acres of spinach, four acres of Green onions and five of cabbage, all turned to "mush."

Quiz Precedes Dental Survey

(Editor's note: Following is the fourth in a series of question and answer articles published by The Oregon Statesman in cooperation with the Marion-Polk-Yamhill Dental Society and the Marion county health department, prior to a school dental survey in the near future.)

Why should permanent teeth be examined soon after they erupt?

So that any cavities may be filled before they can cause serious damage and to let the dentist determine whether the teeth are in proper position.

Is dental prophylaxis (cleaning by a dentist) helpful to dental health of the child?

Yes. Dental prophylaxis helps prevent diseases of the gums by removing deposits and stains from the teeth. Removal of these deposits makes it easier for the dentist to discover the presence of cavities and other faults.

Does dental prophylaxis harm the teeth?

No, there is no evidence that dental prophylaxis given at six-month intervals does any damage to the teeth.

Do x-ray pictures of a child's teeth serve any useful purpose?

They serve several very useful purposes. They enable the dentist to find disease conditions which otherwise might escape detection until serious and perhaps irreparable damage has been done. X-ray examination also shows whether the permanent teeth are present in the child's mouth and reveals early signs of cavities, the presence of supernumerary (extra) teeth and other abnormal conditions.

When should a child's teeth be given sodium fluoride applications?

The most widely approved procedure consists of a series of four applications at the ages of 3, 7, 10 and 13 years.

Does the sodium fluoride treatment keep a child completely free from tooth decay?

No, the treatment is only a partial preventive. However, results of carefully controlled experiments have shown that sodium fluoride treatment has reduced tooth decay by as much as 40 per cent among large groups of children.
