Parents Say Boys' Group Not Secretive

Strong objection to secret societies were voiced Wednesday by a number of parents of boys, who are charged with secret society activities.

The opposition to the societies came in the trial here Tuesday of 18 Salem high school students against the Salem district school board. The boys were expelled by the board last October for alleged secret society activities.

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Lebold said they were against secret society and that they did not think the ABC club was secret. Mrs. Lebold said she considered the club open and above-board. She said she would not have permitted her son, Gene, to join if she had considered it to be secret.

All the parents admitted reading a pamphlet, distributed at the start of the school year, outlining the school authorities' stand against secret groups. Nearly all said they had not contacted any faculty member concerning the boys club because they "did not think the club concerned the school at all."

Some of the boys testified that the legality of the club had been discussed at some of their meetings, but that they considered it to be a legal group. One boy said he discussed the club openly with a Salem high coach and with several teachers.

Anson O. Bridges testified that all the parents present at the October 10 meeting with the school board prior to expulsion, were given a chance to talk.

He said many of the parents expressed themselves freely about the club. He added that the board members "did not appear interested and did not ask any questions."

Spot ERP Aid Need Reported By Acheson

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21 —(AP)—Secretary of State Acheson served notice on congress today that American "spot aid" will still be needed after the four-year European recovery program ends in 1952.

There has been talk of such a need before, but this is the first time the administration has made it so flat and official.

The secretary also warned that Russia is showing "signs of increasing boldness" in pursuit of the Kremlin's "design for world domination."

Acheson did not set a figure for "spot aid" to follow the Marshall plan, which already involves nearly $12,000,000,000 for the first three years. But he made it clear that he considers the United States has no choice but to continue its foreign aid.

The post-1952 assistance, he said, will be required to get individual nations over the economic hump.

Acheson spent most of the day on Capitol Hill, first testifying before a joint session of the senate and house foreign committees in support of the administration's plea for $3,100,000,000 to aid European recovery for the third year.

Then he went before the house foreign-affairs committee in a lively two-hour session in which a barrage of questions drew from him the admission that the end of American aid is not yet in sight.

The cabinet members said the extent of future aid depends on the success of America's efforts to "close the dollar gap."

Theatre Chain Target of Anti-Trust Suit

NEW YORK, Feb. 21 —(AP)—The federal government brought a civil anti-trust suit today to break up the fabulous theatrical empire of "the Shuberts"—the boys from Syracuse, N.Y., who built a coast-to-coast chain once valued at $400,000,000.

The justice department said the Shuberts, through their control of theatres and stage productions, have a stranglehold on the legitimate theatre business throughout the country.

Filed in federal court here, the complaint names Lee Shubert, his brother Jacob J. Shubert; their associate, Marcus Heiman, and three corporations said to be controlled by them—United Booking Office, Inc.; Select Theatres Corp.; and L.A.B. Amusement Corp.

In Washington, Attorney General J. Howard McGrath said the suit was brought "to remove the fetters imposed on this business and to make it possible for any person to enter any branch of the business on a fair, competitive basis."

The justice department said the Shuberts control or have an interest in 17 of New York's 32 legitimate theatres, all six in Boston, all four in Philadelphia, seven of the nine in Chicago and others in Los Angeles, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Detroit, Baltimore and Washington, D.C.

Lee Shubert is in Miami Beach, Fla., but a statement issued for him here said in part:

"We have every confidence that . . . we shall be able to demonstrate beyond all doubt that we have never engaged in anything that could possibly be construed as a violation of the anti-trust laws."

Pearson Calls For an End to I-Party Rule

In announcing his candidacy Tuesday for the democratic nomination for governor, State Treasurer Walter J. Pearson issued this statement:

"I propose to return to the people of Oregon the government of their state. For over a quarter of a century Oregon's government has been under one-party control whose leadership has been dictated by ultra-conservatives and special interests. My years of experience as a legislator, state treasurer and member of the state board of control have convinced me of the urgent necessity to act now in behalf of all the people.

"Oregon is the fastest growing state in the Union. We cannot be satisfied with a policy of 'What's wrong with the way we are doing it now?' Unless democracy looks to the future and progresses, it will die. You cannot have liberty and freedom unless you are tolerant, and willing for all the people to share in their government.

"Realizing that the voters of Oregon want a change in the state government, members of both parties have urged me to become a candidate for governor. For personal reasons I have been reluctant to make the race. Democrats from all walks of life throughout the state want a nominee who has always believed in the democratic platform and adhered to the principles of the party.

"The democratic party is more important than any individual. I believe firmly the ballot should be full from top to bottom so the voters may have a chance in the primaries to select the nominee they think can best lead the fight.

"Believing in that fundamental principle, I shall continue to offer my service in behalf of the party and for the good of the state as a whole. Further, I urge all other democrats who believe in the liberal planning of our party, to join me in the campaign by filing for the legislature and every other public office. Let us end the one-party rule in Oregon."

City and Idanha.

League President Hollis S. Smith, mayor of Dallas, said 1950 meetings have been timed to coincide with the planning of city budgets. He stressed the fact that the meeting will be devoted largely to informal round-table discussions with opportunity for the several city delegations to present their particular problems.

Herman Kehrl, league executive secretary; Deane Seeger, league consultant; and Arnold M. Westling, planning and public works consultant for the bureau of municipal research and service, also will attend.
